CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney.

With your re-entries. Don't be too anxious to ruff a suit if there is a possibility of establishing good cards of which to discard this suit. Bold bidding gets the declarer into a small slam declaration, but careful playing of the hand gives him his contract.

 ♠ A-K-8-4 ♥ A-Q-5 ♦ K-8-7-5-2 ♣ 10 	 ♠ J-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2 ♥ 9-5-3-2 ♦ K-3 ♣ Q-4 ♠ J-7-4
 ♠ Q-7-6 ♥ 10-8-6 ♦ J-10-9 ♣ Q-8-6-5 	 ♠ None ♥ J-9-7-4-2 ♦ A-6-3 ♣ A-K-9-3-2

The Bidding.

South, the dealer opened the contracting with one club. West passed and North overcalled with a spade. This is a one bid over a one bid and is known as the one over one. It requires partner to keep the bidding open at least once. East passed and South bid two clubs. North then bid three diamonds and South three hearts which North boldly took to six hearts.

The Play

West's opening lead was the jack of diamonds which South, the declarer, won with the ace. Most players would now make the mistake of attempting to ruff a club. The proper play is to lead the deuce of hearts and finesse the queen. East will win with the king and return the three of hearts, hoping to stop the declarer from getting a valuable ruff. The declarer wins the trick with the jack of hearts and leads the three of diamonds, winning the dummy with the king. The ace of spades is then led from dummy and the six of diamonds discarded.

The five of diamonds is played from dummy. East discarding the three of spades and the declarer trumping. The seven of hearts is led to dummy's ace which picks up the only outstanding trump in the opponents' hands. The declarer then leads the king of spades from dummy and discards a small club. Two good diamonds are led from dummy, discarding the three and nine of clubs. Then the 10 of clubs is led, declarer winning with the ace. His

FERNDALDE GOES ASHORE OFF EAST OF ALGIERS

Algiers, June 18.

The former Australian Commonwealth Line steamship "Ferndale," of 9,674 tons burden, has gone ashore on the Dellys Rock, fifty miles to the East of Algiers.

The whole of the crew has been taken off, and is safe.—Reuter's Special Service.

Rescuer Strikes Rock.

Algiers, June 19.

Steaming to assist the British cargo ship Ferndale, another British vessel, the British Sovereign, struck a rock and had to be towed to Algiers.

The Ferndale is now considered to be lost. Several of her holds are flooded, but others are protected by watertight doors, and it is hoped that most of the cargo, including 9,000 bales of wool, 1,000 tons of lead, 500 tons of zinc and a quantity of apples and frozen mutton, will be salvaged.

The captain and some of the members of the crew are remaining aboard the stranded ship.—Reuter's Special Service.

king of clubs and nine of hearts are both good for the last two tricks.

By refusing to ruff clubs and with careful play, the declarer has made his contract of six odd.

NEW HAIR

Growing her own hair

If the roots are there your hair will grow again if you use White's Comb once or twice a day. You can't tell its different from an ordinary comb—yet White's Electric Comb is reviving to the hair roots—waking them up—bringing them to life. Roots of hair that have become dormant are revitalized, made to do their work again; made to send out "shoots" of strong hair.

Behind these rolling clouds of smoke, raging flames were sweeping a $2,500,000 pier of the Cunard Line in New York when this picture was taken. More than 700 firemen, fifty pieces of land fire apparatus and a half-dozen fireboats fought to prevent the blaze from spreading to adjoining piers, and surgeons treated scores of persons affected by the smoke.

For 48 hours a blaze had raged under a Cunard Steamship Company pier in the Hudson River. The huge structure finally collapsed, as you see in this picture. Damage amounted to at least $2,000,000. Scores of firemen were overcome by smoke. The only fatality was that of an architect, Ralph A. Kluge, who had designed the pier. He was killed by a swinging hose nozzle while watching the blaze.

MAN HUNTERS

BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY.

Susan Carey, 19, pretty and an orphan, lives with her Aunt Jessie on the West Side of Chicago. On finishing a business course she is employed by Ernest Heath, architect. She meets Jack Waring, man about town, and Ray Flannery, stenographer in the office across the way. Waring seems flirtatious but Susan discourages him. Mrs. Heath openly snubs Susan. Bob Dunbar, young millionaire who attended business school with her, invites Susan to lunch, starts to say something important and is interrupted by Denise Ackroyd, a society girl. Dunbar asks for her. Susan realizes she came deeply for him. Ben Lampman, another admirer, takes her to a studio party but she declines his friends. Aunt Jessie departs to visit her sister and Rose Milton, slightly older than Susan, comes to stay with her. Susan, lonely, accepts Waring's invitation for an evening's fun.

CHAPTER XIV

The "place out on the Milwaukee Road" proved to be a big old house, set back from the highway and flanked by rows of ancient maples. It was such a house as one of Chicago's meat-barons might have built in the nineties—all curlicues and hybrid ornamentation. Outside it had a sort of remote, Victorian dignity, but inside it was hung with the cheap colours of a temple of jazz.

The coloured girl in the coat room accepted Susan's wrap with superb disdain. Susan was terribly nervous. There was something about the atmosphere of the place that disturbed her. Ray, however, seemed perfectly at ease. She demanded hairpins, spilled powder about, and bullied the check girl unmercifully. Delighted with the effect she had produced, Ray ordered Susan to follow her and the two—tall brunette and petite blonde—joined their escorts.

At the end of the long room an orchestra thumped out a monotonous jungle dirge. "It was strange, sultry music. After a brief consultation of menus Waring asked Susan to dance. The tempo of the music had quickened. There was more life in it now. The saxophone experienced to notice it. As a matter of course she refused to have her ginger ale "spiked." Waring's urbanity seemed to increase and if Schuyler Webb laughed noisily now and then she put it down to collegiate high spirits and gave it no further thought.

They ate and danced and danced again. Susan had no idea of the time. But as group after group drifted in and the smoke began to hang in clouds over the big room she was conscious of a sense of uneasiness.

"Isn't it terribly late?" she murmured to Waring. They were dancing a waltz and the sensuous strains of the music made Susan's pulses throb.

"Nonsense!" he laughed at her. "The night's young. We've only started to play. I knew you'd be a wonderful playmate," he whispered. "Only you were so stand-offish I never had a chance to find out." He was holding her closely, too closely, Susan thought, her instinct sharpened and revolted for an instant by the scent of liquor on his breath.

A moment ago he had been a quiet friend—flushed and voluble. It is true, but still a friend. Now Waring was becoming a menace, a strange man with a reddened face, a man who had been drinking. Susan could see the little lines around his eyes. All of a sudden she thought of Bob Dunbar, his firm, clean youthfulness. It was as if a clean, sweet breeze had blown across a stagnant waste. She knew with aching certainty why she had been trapped into this indiscretion. If she could not have the real thing she had been willing to take second best.

"Really, I must go," she pleaded. "Rose—my friend—will be waiting for me. She hasn't a key."

Waring smiled at her a little foolishly. "Be nice!" he muttered in an unsure voice. "Don't spoil everything while the evening's still on the make."

Uncomfortable but determined, Susan persisted. At last Waring, annoyed, stopped at their table and consulted his watch. The girl gasped at what she saw.

"It's 11:30," she exclaimed. "And it will take a good hour to get home! Whatever shall I do?"

Ray reddened her lips unconcernedly. "Don't crab the party," she said calmly. "It's going good."

Miserable, Susan stared at her. "Sky" Webb laughed foolishly. "Let's move along, anyhow," he said. "Let's off-riff here. We can go to Tony's. Like Tony's better, anyhow."

What followed was to be a nightmare in Susan's memory forever. The rocketing ride in the car to another noisy scene of hilarity, the band whose unrelenting music seemed never to come to an end, the wild bursts of laughter from the crowd at the next table, White-faced, her eyes ringed in shadows as the night unwound itself, Susan surveyed the scene. If this were pleasure, she'd be glad to take her share of misery.

"I want to go home . . . I want to go home," she wailed in her inmost heart, although outwardly she appeared contained and calm. How blessed, from this vantage, was the thought of the white haven of her narrow room, how marvelously safe the tiny house on the shabby street!

And what would Rose think? She would be frantic! Susan's head began to ache. A steady, deep throb of pain it was. She smiled with difficulty and when she danced her feet were no longer light.

What a little fool she had been! Why had she come?

It was one o'clock. It was two. Through it all Ray remained pert, fresh and composed. She drank little. Ray "didn't believe" in it. But the shifting scene did not shock or startle her. Ray was a true child of the pavements. Nothing bothered her except the menace of unpopularity. It was enough to have "a date" for the evening. Where she might go or who her escort might be did not seem greatly to matter. Ray said she "knew how to take care of herself" and Susan, glancing at her, decided that probably she did.

"But I don't belong here," Susan decided. "This isn't what I want. Somewhere there must be the things I've dreamed of—glamorous, romantic, places with music and gaiety that aren't cheap. This isn't it!"

At half past two they departed. In the car Waring tried to put his arm around her but Susan shrank. "Don't like me, eh?" His laugh sounded foolish.

She forced a smile to her stiff lips. She must not offend this man. "Of course, I do. But I'm nervous about your driving. And it's so dark out here."

Ray called. "Don't worry about that. 'Jack's' used to one-arm driving, aren't you?"

"Atta girl. Atta baby!" That was Sky. Sky was almost asleep on Ray's shoulder. Waring's arm remained where it was though. Susan shrank from it. They were on the outskirts of the city now. The

Greta—have you met her? Norwegian, Miss Nissen born in Oslo.
She studied music, dancing and dramatic art in the Royal Opera House,
Copenhagen, Denmark. When only six, she played a tiny angel in a big ballet, but what an angel. Following the road of fame with dancing feet,
she went on the stage—first in the National Theatre, Oslo, then in other European capitals. In those days,
she appeared by royal command
Broadway first fell for her as the pantomime sensation of "Beggars On Horseback" which brought picture contracts. She played in "The Wanderer" and "Love Thief." In the Fox picture "Zill" she was featured with Charles Farrell. She tried several stage ventures, losing money, accident but not her figure. She signed a new feature in "Women of All Nations" and "Transatlantic."

Her latest role is that of an intriguing siren in "Ambassador Bill."
Will Rogers starring picture showing to-day at the King's Theatre, in which the famed comedian portrays a homesick U. S. diplomat who hilariously lives up to his name. Miss Nissen is mistress of the dancing art from tap
to toe, including the Scandinavian.
She insists she doesn't care for clothes which is somewhat ambiguous,
but those she wears she wears. Greta's growing in favour every day. Her art
as an actress matches her skill as a dancer. She is nimble at both ends,
a shiver, a quiver. In Kissin, Nissen
isn't missin'!

"The Perfect Alibi,"
A. A. Milne, author of the play,
"The Fourth Wall," from which the coming attraction at the Queen's Theatre, "The Perfect Alibi," is taken, is one of England's foremost writers, credited with several successfully produced plays, and a number of novels which have enjoyed tremendous circulations everywhere. As a stage play, "The Perfect Alibi" enjoyed a highly successful run for two years. Some of Milne's other better-known plays are "The Dover Road,"
"Mr. Pin Passes By," and "The Ivory Door," the last of which ran for ten months in New York.

Milne is world-famous for his series
of books for children. The Christopher Robin series, the main character
of which is his seven-year-old son, is still widely read; one of the books,
"Winnie the Pooh," was one of the outstanding best-sellers in the United States alone. "We Are Six" and
"When We Were Young," two other books in the series, were likewise best-sellers.

"The Perfect Alibi," which will be shown at the Queen's Theatre this week after "The Bigger Student" is a Basil Dean production released by Robert Lorraine, Frank Lawton,
Dorothy Boyd, C. Aubrey Smith, Warwick Ward, Ellis Jeffreys and others.

"24 Hours,"
A tribute rated by few, perhaps no other cinema neophyte, was that recorded Virginia Lee Pickering, petite, blonde and blue-eyed, when she made her initial entry on the Paramount
set for her role in "24 Hours," dialogue edition of Louis Bromfield's popular novel which the King's Theatre will show, beginning next Wednesday.

kerling. Regis Toomey instantly deserted lovely Miriam Hopkins; Director Marion Gering and other folk engaged production, sprang from their chairs to bolster the ranks of the self-appointed welcome committee. Virginia Lee was only six months, two weeks and one day old
on this occasion, and looked decidedly fetching in her fluffy ensemble and pillowing of pink and white. However, she proved herself a real trouper, doing her part to the complete satisfaction of the director. She cried once, and that fortunately,
was part of her role. The young actress was accompanied on the set by her mother, Mrs. George Pickering, a nurse, and Rachel Smith head
of the child welfare department in Paramount's Hollywood studio. At the conclusion of her scene in the picturization of Louis Bromfield's best-selling novel, Virginia Lee was accorded a privilege which never has been granted any other person: A limousine was driven up a ramp and through solid-opened "special doors" directly onto the sound stage, to take her home in the style befitting the furore she created at the studio.

"Arrowsmith" at the Central
"Arrowsmith," Samuel Goldwyn's
picture starring Ronald Colman as the crusading young doctor, now at the Central Theatre to be shown at 5.15
and 9.30 p.m. only for the next two days, is acknowledged to be the masterpiece of Sinclair Lewis who is the first American novelist ever to be awarded a Noble Prize. Even before he received that world-wide honour
last year, he had been known for ten years as a leader of American literature.

The notion of writing a novel about
a plague-fighting hero came to him
from Dr. Paul de Kruif, the famous bacteriologist and eminent writer on medical subjects. All of the authentic material contained in the book
and the picture was supplied by Dr.
de Kruif, whose books "Microbe Hunters" and "Hunger Fighters" have been best sellers almost as popular as Lewis' own.

"Arrowsmith" was one of the issues which led to the famous quarrel last year between Sinclair Lewis and Theodore Dreiser at the Metropolitan Club, Dreiser claiming that the project had been offered to him before it was to Lewis and that he had refused
it.

Sidney Howard, the Pulitzer Prize
playwright who has done the adapting
to the screen of all Ronald Colman's
talking pictures, asserted after finishing the adaptation of "Arrowsmith," that Sinclair Lewis' method of writing makes his books ideal from the technical point of view for the screen.
Their vivid characterization, episodic
treatment and rapid action, he said,
left the adapter little to do but concentrate the action and cut out minor details.

John Ford, director of the famous
"The Iron Horse," had charge of the production of "Arrowsmith," a United Artists picture, for Samuel Goldwyn.
Besides Ronald Colman in the leading role, the cast contains Helen Hay-Richard Bennett, A. E. Anson, Baylei
Bondi and Myrna Loy.

THE ECONOMY BOGEY

There are, we fear, still very many people who are dissatisfied with the League of Nations and with the World Disarmament Conference. It is, however, noteworthy that the critics are generally those who have never shown any real anxiety to assist in making the League an effective and powerful international instrument or in encouraging the idea that the Geneva Conference shall achieve positive results for a reduction in national armaments. Strangely enough, the suggestion that the Powers in general, and Britain in particular, should turn their backs upon both the League and the Conference, is usually put forward in the name of "economy." Objection is taken to what is called "the growing expenditure of the League of Nations and the heavy outlay connected with international conferences." In this connexion, it has been pointed out that the cost of the Disarmament Conference is some £175,000 to the League, while the cost of the British delegation is estimated at some £40,000 in addition.

The favourite argument put forward by these critics is that there is really nothing to show for these Conferences, and that the old plan of negotiating by diplomacy was certainly enormously cheaper. It seems to be forgotten, however, that in the days of "the old diplomacy" the Great War cost Britain about £9,000,000,000; that it left her with a National Debt in the region of £8,000,000,000; that she had nearly a million dead and over two million wounded; that the damage to property in the British Empire was estimated to be something approaching £400,000,000; and that Britain lost mercantile shipping of over 9,000,000 gross tonnage. These items do not exhaust the full list of costs—direct and indirect—but they are sufficient to remind us how terrible is the toll that war exacts. It is strange that the word "economy" is seldom used in relation to the expenditure on war. The critics do not raise any protest against the expenditure of millions of pounds a day for war purposes. But they begrudge the comparatively infinitesimal amount that is being spent by Britain on the collective efforts to secure a real measure of disarmament which will strengthen world peace and security—which means also Britain's security—and help to save the peoples from another costly conflict. Moreover it is not true to say that the Disarmament Conference has nothing to show for its labours. What has definitely emerged is that substantial results can be secured if the Governments represented—including our own—are really determined to succeed. Furthermore, the prospects have improved as a result of the "Left" victory in the French elections.

If by an expenditure of £40,000 Britain can assist in the formulation of an agreed plan for international reduction of armaments, the expenditure will be in the nature of a profitable investment. For the Prime Minister has already declared that the alternative to an effective disarmament agreement may be increased building by Great Britain under the escalator clause of the London Agreement. If that should eventuate, the additional cost to taxpayers will not be a few thousands of pounds, but several millions of pounds. And Britain is already spending over £100,000,000 a year on armaments. Real economy means wise expenditure, and there is surely no wiser expenditure than that incurred on efforts to lighten the burden of armaments, increase international security and make the resort to war unnecessary.

Sir Denison Ross has implied that too many young men and women in England go to the universities. This is an opinion so frequently voiced that some examination of it may be profitable. At the outset it may be remarked that if England errs at all in this respect, it does not err so grievously as some other countries. One in every 1150 English persons has had a university education, compared with one in every 690 in Germany. From the point of view of those who regard a university training as a dangerous possession, the English record compares even more favourably with that of Scotland, where one in every 455 has a degree. In the United States the proportion is still more startling, being one in 125. The argument usually advanced against opening the doors of the universities too widely is the desirability of keeping up the standard of work done in them. Even to-day some things are done in universities which really have no place there. These are not confined to any one country. If a United States college has awarded a Ph. D. degree for a treatise on a high school cafeteria, an English university considers that it furthers the cause of learning by giving a course in brewing. If the tendency to teach this sort of thing were encouraged by admitting more people to the universities, or if enlarging the universities' area of recruitment meant filling them with students incapable of deriving benefit from the genuinely cultural studies pursued in them, an irresistible case for keeping down their numbers would have been made out. But would this be the natural effect?

There are two ways of getting more students into English universities. One is to lower the standard of the entrance examination, thus opening them up to those who can afford to pay their fees but cannot pass the intellectual tests they set for admission. The other is to give more and more public assistance to those who can pass the intellectual tests but cannot afford the fees. The first method undoubtedly would lower speedily the standard of scholarship maintained in Britain's centre of higher learning. But fortunately there is not the smallest prospect of its being adopted. It is a partial putting into practice of the second method that has brought about the density of population in the universities which some authorities view with alarm. Obviously, their alarm is without foundation. In the last few years numbers of young men and women who would not otherwise have done so have been enabled by public assistance to get a university education in Britain. The standard of learning of no university has been adversely

THE ARTISTS OF THE COUNTRY ARE THE PEOPLE WHO HAVE THE RIGHT TO SAY HOW THE PEOPLE SHOULD BE CLOTHED. FOR THEY HAVE THE KNOWLEDGE OF WHAT WILL BEST SUIT THE HUMAN FORM.—Oscar Wilde.

Mrs. Knight of the Peninsula Hotel has notified the Police that she lost her hand-bag in Don Vaux Road one afternoon. The bag contained a small sum of money and personal articles.

A new weekly journal made its appearance in Hongkong on Saturday. Named The Critic, it follows, in format, Truth, the well-known London periodical. It sells at fifty cents per copy.

A watch and fob to the value of $20 was stolen from the bed room of Mr. Mitara, who occupies room No. 31 at the Trocadero Hotel, Peking Road. The watch was taken some time during Friday afternoon.

Lo Shu, the folk of a passenger boat, was fined $20 or two weeks' imprisonment by the Hon. Comdr. Hoie, at the Marine Court, this morning, for having made his craft quarters under the bridge while she was under way in the harbour this morning.

Mr. A. E. Bates has arrived from New Zealand for the purpose of taking over the activities of the New Zealand Perpetual Forests, Ltd., in Hongkong. He is accompanied by Mr. L. A. Falkner, who is the Far East Business Manager, and is resident at Repulse Bay Hotel.

The British film version of the Viennese operetta, "The Beggar Student", now showing at the Queen's, is an extremely creditable production. Shirley Dale and Lance Fairfax, who share the musical honours, Mr. Fairfax having a particularly fine voice, play their parts with restraint, while the humorous interludes are provided by Jerry Verna (Jon Janik) and Mark Daly (The Sergeant).

Eight Chinese were brought before Mr. Fraser, at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court, this morning, charged with stealing away from Macassar to Hongkong on the Dutch steamer Tjiliboet. It was stated that after the steamer had left Macassar, the defendants were found in the steerage quarters without any money to pay their passage. His Worship imposed a fine of $75, or six weeks, the fine being equivalent to the cost of the passage.

Banished for life seven years ago, an elderly Chinese was charged before Mr. Fraser, at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court, this morning, and was sentenced to nine months' hard labour. His record showed that he was convicted some time ago of armed robbery and kidnapping and was sentenced to 11 years' hard labour. When he had served his sentence, he had intended to impose a sentence of 12 months, but in consideration for accused's age, he would take three months off.

ly affected by this, because in every single case the requirements of the university's entrance examination have been fully satisfied before the question of public assistance has arisen. On the contrary, this development has raised the standard of university work in England by considerably widening the field from which the universities may pick their students.

OUR MUDDLED ELDERS

Why Youth Awaits the Coming Crash.
By "THIRTY"

"Civilisation, of course, is cracking up; but otherwise things aren't so bad!"

THE SPEAKER was a clever young business man and the remark was made as casually as a reference to the weather, for it represents the point of view of many men and women of the younger generation. The coming collapse of "civilisation," as we know it, is regarded as something too obvious for discussion, like the incompetence of politicians, or the burden of taxation. The only point in discussion is when the collapse will come, and how. What older people are just beginning timidly to hint to their incredulous contemporaries, younger people have long regarded as self-evident. And the reason for this is that the younger generation has a more realistic outlook.

To older people this may seem both sweeping and startling, so perhaps I ought first to explain the reasons for the different outlook of those of us who have been born since the beginning of the century. One reason is that we have been born into a more difficult world than our parents. In order to exist we have to examine problems that never troubled them. They were born in the phlegmatic times of prosperity, and when they were young the world was a comparatively comfortable and stable place. Despite the convulsions of latter years, they cannot visualise a permanently different order of things. They do not grasp the significance of the changes that are taking place under their eyes.

We, on the other hand, can barely remember a stable world. We have never known the comfortable assurance that prosperity breeds, and our view of the future is not clouded by any set notions as to what life should be like. We have open minds to expect anything, or nothing, from the future.

Another reason is that our upbringing and environment have been different from that of previous generations because of the advent of the machine. Almost from the nursery we have been interested in scientific or mechanical things. Subconsciously, perhaps, but inevitably, this has given us a different mental approach to life because association with anything mechanical or scientific induces exact thinking, which is sometimes mistaken for irreverence or a sense of superiority.

If our cars, or our wireless sets, or even our homely electric lights go wrong, we know that there is an exact reason for the trouble and that, till we find it, they cannot go right again. Therefore we are moulded in a frame of mind which demands—and gets—an exact answer to curiosity in so many of the things in which we are interested. When our curiosity in the wider problems of life is not gratified by an exact answer, because age cannot supply it, we lose confidence in age. Age fails to impress us, because age's mental approach to a problem is so different and to us—so unsatisfying.

If my car breaks down on the road it is no use adopting the technique which age employs to solve its problems. It is idle to form a committee of investigation and to be content with a compromise decision, a majority verdict, or with mere unreasoning and optimistic deductions from history about "muddling through." Till the exact reason for the trouble is found the car will not go.

Such instances face my generation every day, and naturally induce an uncompromising attitude of mind. When we apply this outlook to the present state of the world we find that the world has gone hopelessly wrong, and that those in charge of it, who are largely responsible for its present condition, can advance no coherent explanations and merely hurry from one nonplussed conference to another.

Meanwhile, the great machine of civilisation is obviously plunging headlong to disaster. It is not surprising, therefore, that we should have no confidence in the ability of the drivers to apply the brakes, however many beautiful phrases they invent. If they knew how to apply the brakes they would have applied them long since. It is obvious, from the existence of so many divergent political and economic theories, that they do not know. For clearly all those theories cannot be right. And no amount of optimism or reference to history books can convince us that disaster will be avoided. History, in any case, is far too young to show any close parallel to the present situation, even if history were ever an infallible argument.

If one sees a car plunging over a cliff, it is not convincing or encouraging to the onlookers to assure them that in a previous case of the same sort the occupants emerged unscathed. All the indications are against it happening again.

Let us look at the present indications. The world is completely out of control, economically and politically. Conditions are getting worse and politicians, financiers and business men are powerless to do anything. All the indications, therefore, point to a complete collapse.

Several older men to whom I have suggested this have replied, in almost identical words: "I admit that it looks as if things are going to collapse, but, of course, it will never be allowed. They cannot afford to let civilisation go."

Who "they" are is never clearly explained, but it is hinted that "they" are the master-minds of politics and finance. If this is so—and this is the only argument against collapse I have heard—my generation may be forgiven for having no confidence in "them" for letting things get so far. It is high time "they" stopped playing and put an end to the joke.

It is clear that the country in which things are most hopeful is England, and that if any country can reintroduce stability to the world it will be our own. Let us, therefore, examine the mysterious and omnipotent "they" of England to see what we can hope for from them.

Turning to the politicians, we find that the present National Government is composed of the very men, of all parties, who by their action—or inaction—in the past are responsible for the state of affairs to-day. Such remedial measures as the Government has so far taken have been the result, not of vision or leadership, but of fear and necessity. An emergency has compelled them to do, too late, what foresight and courage should have accomplished voluntarily years ago. The fact that some of them foresaw disaster makes their responsibility heavier. But responsibility plays no part in modern politics. In fact, plain defection from duty is usually rewarded by a peerage. Meanwhile, it is idle to expect salvation from a Government which cannot achieve the team-spirit of a village cricket club, is afraid to institute the drastic measures of economy which are essential, can be scared by a few hundred post-cards, and dare not even take a strong line in such a trivial matter as Sunday cinemas.

Apart from the politicians, to whom we will return later, we have to consider the financiers and the business men. Discarding the jargon with which it is the fashion to cloak financial incompetence, we are confronted with the plain fact that our intelligent financiers have lent the resources of this country to bankrupt foreign States to assist them in competing with our wretched industries. They have just realised that they will never see their money back, and now spend their time discussing how much good money to throw after bad.

In this money-worshipping age, it is perhaps the crowning blasphemy for a young man to suggest that the "big business man" must take his share of the blame for the present state of affairs, even if it is not the largest share. But

THE BOOKSHELF

THE SINO-JAPANESE PUZZLE

"The Sino-Japanese Puzzle," by Dr. Neville Whyman (Messrs. Victor Gollancz, Ltd., London, 2s. 6d. net.) is a little book which is likely to meet with a mixed reception. The author, formerly Professor of Oriental Classics and Mythology in Tokyo University, Assistant in Chinese and Japanese at Oxford, and Lecturer in Chinese and Japanese in the University of London, has essayed a big task in presenting, within the limits of 160 pages, a study of the origins, causes and effects of the recent conflict between China and Japan. He is, however, well equipped for the undertaking and he gives us a book which is well worth pondering over.

Analysing the history of the Chinese and Japanese peoples, the author is at pains to point out the error of considering present troubles as arising from present causes. He dives into the historical background, emphasises the different traits of the two peoples and presents to the reader a fascinating comparative study in national psychology. It is not possible within the space at our disposal to follow the author through his reading of history, or to give anything like a comprehensive summary of his conclusions. Suffice it to say, that Dr. Whyman, though critical of both countries, particularly so of Japan and her policies, is constructive in his criticism. Of China, he says that she lacks at the moment the man who will be strong enough to pull together all the best qualities she has, and hold them aloft for the nation to see. "But that she has failed in this great emergency is no guarantee that she will fail again, or that she has lost those very qualities which have brought her out of similar situations before. She now needs help; she will either go forward to greater glory than she has yet achieved, or she will remain submerged for some time longer, continue to be a prey to all kinds of random political theories which are but half digested, and constitute a growing menace to the peace and ease of the whole world."

The author is, not without reason, up in arms against the "pretty-pretty" writers on Japan who have made a business of fooling their readers ever since the country has been accessible to the dilettante scribbler. He goes beneath the surface, goes down to the essentials and is unparing in his criticism. Japan, he says, has shown indecision and a tendency to adopt changes without a preliminary trial of their fitness for her people. "She is predisposed to the spectacular, the aggressive, and too ready to be deceived by anything showy. But with the development of a critical faculty, and the growth of an international spirit to take the place of an exaggerated nationalism, Japan will become one of the most important factors in world relationships."

On the whole, a book which is most thought-provoking, but one which will assuredly find no favour amongst the Japanese.

LIGHT FICTION.

In "Lone Lark," by E. Charles Vivian (Ward, Lock, and Co., London, 3s. 6d. net.) we have a strong story, full of exciting situations, of the type which has made the author so deservedly popular. It is a pearl fishery story, with mystery encountered at almost every turn, and there is a most surprising denouement. A little drawn-out in parts, the tale is none the less, one which will hold the reader's interest to the end.

Miss L.G. Moberly continues to give us vivid novels, written with charm and ability. In "A Mystery Chain" (Ward, Lock and Co.) she has as main character a foreign woman who poses as a great philanthropist but who, under cover of her social activities, is involved in many shady matters. How she gains power and influence over others is told in a most interesting story, which is relieved by a double romance.

Another of Miss Moberly's novels, by the same publishers, is "Rosamond's Ordeal." This is the story of a girl who, on the death of her benefactor, learns that she was not as she supposed, his daughter, but an adopted child. But she had culture none the less, and the story tells how she graced the new social position into which she entered, rising above the difficulties and finding eventual happiness. There is plenty of excitement, leavened with clean, wholesome sentiment.

"THE COUNTRYMAN."

"The Countryman," that unique little quarterly non-party review and miscellany of rural life and industry, goes on from strength to strength. The April number, much enlarged, marks the start of its sixth year of publication. Here we have a publication with a charm all its own. An Thomas Hardy has said of it, "The Countryman" makes one feel in the country"—and the English countryside at that. The latest tribute to its excellence comes from the

THE DEBACLE OF LANGISM

China, and, upon his return to Australia, will make important representations to the Federal authorities regarding the matter. He is convinced that the appointment of a trade representative in Hongkong is a vital necessity.

TRADE WITH EAST.

The Hon. Mr. McPhee is accompanied on his present trip by two prominent Melbourne business men, Messrs. T. S. Nettlefold and C. Le Plastrier. Mr. Le Plastrier is a prominent Victorian patents attorney, whose firm has for years been represented in Hongkong by Messrs. Johnson, Stokes and Master. Mr. Nettlefold is a member of the executive of the Australian Chamber of Manufactures and is also a member of the Melbourne City Council.

Upon his return to Australia, Mr. Nettlefold will submit a comprehensive report to the Chamber of Manufactures on the possibilities of an enlarged Australian trade with the East.

INTERNAL PROBLEMS.

"Trading conditions in Australia to-day," said Mr. Nettlefold, "are suffering from the same depression that is influencing the whole world. Although the political situation has improved considerably with the dismissal of the Lang administration in N.S.W., political devices will not help us much until the price of Australia's primary products, such as wool and wheat, return to normal. We can, and will, control our internal difficulties, but until the economic position of the world returns to normal, our attempts at stabilisation must, to a certain extent, be influenced largely by external instability, over which we have no control."

TURNED CORNER.

"Victoria is fortunate, inasmuch as she has not been hit as severely as the other States of the Commonwealth. Since the return of the Lyons Nationalist Government last September, the trade figures for Victoria show an increase of over thirty per cent. While the Lang administration was in power in N.S.W., an unending stream of capital flowed from that State into Victoria, and eventually investors had the greatest difficulty in finding an outlet for their money."

"Australia has quite definitely turned the corner, but whether she progresses beyond that is entirely dependant on world conditions and the rise in the price of her primary products."

BROTHERS FINED FOR ASSAULT

SEQUEL TO KOWLOON BUS INCIDENT

An altercation outside the Star Ferry Wharf yesterday had a sequel at the Kowloon Magistracy, before Mr. Fraser this morning, when two brothers, Chan Man-foo and Chan Man-fook, were charged with assaulting a man named Chan Wing-tai.

Inspector Elston, who prosecuted, said the parties were known to one another. Yesterday, the complainant met the defendants near the bus stop and he alleged that they assaulted him. Defendants stated that complainant pulled them out of a bus and assaulted them. They retaliated, but did not commence the assault.

His Worship said if that were the case, he did not think the defendants were solely to blame. If a man was pulled out of a bus when he was in a hurry, he was bound to be nasty about it. It appeared to him that the complainant got all he deserved.

Inspector Elston pointed out that the assault was more serious than the provocation warranted. The defendants did not merely assault the complainant, but continued doing so until they were stopped by the police.

Both parties were bound over, and defendants were fined $1 each.

Poet Laureate, who writes that he prefers it to any other periodical, and always reads it through with delight.

Mr. J.W. Robertson Scott, its editor, who is not known in the Far East, has made a tremendous success of this independent rural organ. Not only is it full of interest to the nature-lover, but it deals with the problems of the countryside on sound, practical lines, studiously ignoring the spurious and the superficial. Seeing that a sum of £1 will pay for two years' subscription, "The Countryman" is well within the means of everybody. To those in the Far East who want to keep in touch with the English countryside, we can offer no better advice than to become a regular subscriber.

RADIUM "BOMB" TREATMENT

EXPERT INQUIRY TO BE MADE

The decisions are announced of a conference of famous doctors which discussed doubts expressed as to whether the policy of the Radium Commission was in certain respects mistaken, and in particular, as to whether its decision to convert the existing single unit (in use at the Westminster Hospital) of four grams of radium into four units of one gram each was sound.

The Conference included Lord Dawson of Penn; Lord Moylham; representatives of the Radium Commission, the Medical Research Council, and the British Medical Association; the President of the Royal Society of Medicine, and the chief medical officer of the L.C.C. A resolution adopted by them, published in the current issues of the medical journals, is as follows:

"In the opinion of the Conference, an expert committee should be appointed, with the following references:

"What is the scientific case for mass radiation by radium, and what are the advantages and dangers attaching to the use of such radiation?"

"What are the advantages and risks of massive surface radiation by radium compared with those of radium needles and radon seeds?"

It is on these two questions that the whole of the radium controversy has centred from the first:

Problematical Benefits.

The Conference found it impossible to avoid the conclusion that the benefits from the bomb to patients under present conditions in the Westminster Hospital, are problematical, and that the use of the bomb is at present experimental, involving considerable outlay of money.

It was decided that the conclusion of the Radium Commission in discontinuing the use of the "bomb" was a sound one—without prejudice, however, to the question of the therapeutic value of four-gram or even larger aggregations of radium.

It was also decided that "a fully equipped radium institute is needed in London, where the more difficult and speculative problems connected with radium and ray therapy can be studied by the combined efforts of a trained staff."

ALLEGED CARGO PILFERING

FIVE CHINESE APPEAR IN COURT

As a result of the arrest of several boatmen and the recovery of part of a consignment of cargo which had been consigned to Kaymally & Co., five Chinese, including two women, appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court this morning in connexion with the pilfering.

The three men were alleged to have stolen six rolls of artificial silk and 186 yards of tweed cloth from a cargo boat in the harbour on Thursday last, while the two women were charged with receiving stolen property.

The men all pleaded guilty, but the women denied receiving.

Detective Sergeant D. Fitches, who prosecuted, asked for a remand until Wednesday, the case accordingly being adjourned for 48 hours.

Pang Cheung-shun, of the China Oil Company, was charged before the Hon. Comdr. Hoie, at the Marine Court this morning, with having moored three lighters, which were laden with fuel oil, at a place other than the dangerous goods anchorage. The defendant admitted the offence, and was fined $50 or one month's imprisonment.

VALUE OF SPORT

STIRRING ADDRESS GIVEN TO ATHLETES

The Eastern Athletic Association "At Home" was held on Saturday night at the Chinese Y.M.C.A. before a large gathering. This club, which was founded four years ago with a membership of 60, can now boast of four hundred members.

The prizes won in the Tennis and Ping Pong competitions were distributed during the evening, a concert being given after the presentation of awards. A skilful exhibition of Chinese boxing, a cinematograph performance and musical items were included in the programme. Master Fred Abraham, the talented young violinist, delighted the audience with some first class solos and was loudly applauded for his fine performance.

The proceedings were presided over by Mr. J. D. Bush. Mr. Hoie, Comptroller of the Mercantile Bank, and Mr. Chow Nann-ung, of the National City Bank, were each presented with a scroll, for the deep interest which they have taken in the development of the Eastern Athletic Association. A special cup was presented to Mr. Lau Wing-yun by the committee for his financial support during the past three years.

Value Of Sport.

Before calling on Mr. Chow Ping-ung, a cousin of Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau, to distribute the prizes for the Ping-Pong and Tennis tournaments, Mr. Bush spoke as follows:

An chairman of this very pleasant gathering, it affords me much pleasure to say a few words on Youth and Sport. For one thing, it is pleasing to note that sports have taken such a good hold of the imagination of Young China to-day. This keenness in sports is especially noticeable in recent years and what a good sign realize what it is to seek the outdoor life in motoring, tennis, swimming, and even yachting.

My purpose within the few moments at my disposal is to dwell on the three-fold object in sports: the playing fields can teach us many useful things that cannot be got anywhere else.

First, games obviously help to keep us physically fit; without the playing fields no nation can expect to improve the physical development and health of its boys and girls. Games constitute one of the effective means of mobilizing and directing the youthful energy of any nation. The Chinese youth should learn to appreciate the full meaning of games, how they teach them to "keep a stiff upper lip" when they are beaten and not to become "swollen-headed" with success. Above all, keep on trying, whether at work or at play. The financial and moral depression of these difficult times is due to the undue impatience of this speed-mad age.

Do your best in the playing fields and leave the result and the verdict to the umpire or judge. No man can be strong in combat or any form of sports unless his heart is right and in the right order for work.

Sportsmanship.

This brings me to the second objective in sports. In moral as well as in physical exercises, the heart must be right. Keep before yourself always the spirit of genuine sportsmanship. Never deviate for a moment from the high standard and uphold the right principle in work or play at all costs. If this ideal can be inbred in the youth of China, the evil of corruption in officialdom will be mitigated in time.

Then the third objective in sports is the team spirit—concentration and co-ordination of efforts of all the members within the group. Give your best for the good of the whole. Submerge the self into the many. Only through co-operation and closest understanding of all the parts, can you attain to get the team going strongly and smoothly. If you know how to co-operate well in the playing fields, you will acquire the fine perception of how to compete, put every ounce of your energy into the game of life and take up the burden of responsibility for your country.

Out of this third objective, in sports emerges the highest life-ideal, namely the pure, unselfish, efficient and consecrated life, life based on Plato's conception of the true, the good and beautiful.

There is really a fourth objective, too; and that is to expand into the Christian philosophy of love and perfect harmony for Humanity.

COMMUNIST PLOT.

A STORY OF INTRIGUE IN KOREA RELEASED

Tokyo, June 19. The ban has been lifted from Press publication of information regarding the Communist intrigue in Korea which was unearthed on April 16 last.

The details as given out by the authorities are as follows: Six Korean Communists smuggled themselves into Solahin, Korea, from Vladivostok, but were arrested and committed for trial.

The trial opens on the 21st inst. The gang was led by a man named Yun Hak, who was acting under orders from the Vladivostok OGPU, and planned to blow up the railway bridge over the Yalu River and the railway tracks, with a view to disturbing the Japanese rear. They reached Solahin on April 14 in a ten-ton sailing boat, which was loaded with 880 sticks of dynamite and a large quantity of revolvers.—Reuter's Special.

Prohibited Meeting.

Tokyo, June 19. Nearly 200 people were arrested and several injured in the scuffle that occurred when police ordered the suspension of the proletarian meeting, which was being held in the Taikyo Theatre this afternoon.—Reuter.

Robbed of her smile by PYORRHEA

ONE of her prettiest attractions—her smile—has been turned to a frown by the one most dreaded of dental diseases, Pyorrhoea. Now her once lovely lips are just two straight lines, her cheeks are sunken and she is almost ashamed to open her mouth.

She has paid a big price for her neglect! Pyorrhoea, that ugly disease of the mouth, has ruined her smile.

You may have it too! For years without a warning sign, but eventually, the gums bleed, become spongy and tender. They hurt! Teeth loosen in their sockets and finally drop out or must be pulled out.

Those who think of the future, safeguard their health and happiness by protecting their teeth and gums when they are healthy. They use LORIAN'S FOR THE GUMS, the one dentifrice made to prevent this insidious disease, pyorrhoea.

Is It to be Perry's Wimbledon?

HIS CHANCE TO RECOVER LOST TITLE

Great International Meeting Opens To-day

BY "VERITAS"

TWENTY THREE YEARS have passed since the late Mr. Arthur Wentworth Gore won for England the Blue Riband of the tennis world—the Men's Singles Championship at Wimbledon. He was the last Englishman to achieve the coveted distinction, but to-day, after years of disappointed hopes, Britain enters what has developed into the biggest International tennis arena in the world, with definite, and in sporting parlance, almost even chances, of regaining her lost title.

ONLY ONE FEAR.

Almost everything depends on F. J. Perry. H. W. Austin as a potential world-beater is now practically legendary. That he will be among the last few is to be expected, but I do not think he is capable of winning the championship.

If the cherished ambitions of all English followers of tennis are to be realised, Perry is the only man for the job. His greatest claim to this confidence is that he has, on different occasions, already beaten the most potent challengers for the title, the only exception being Cochet.

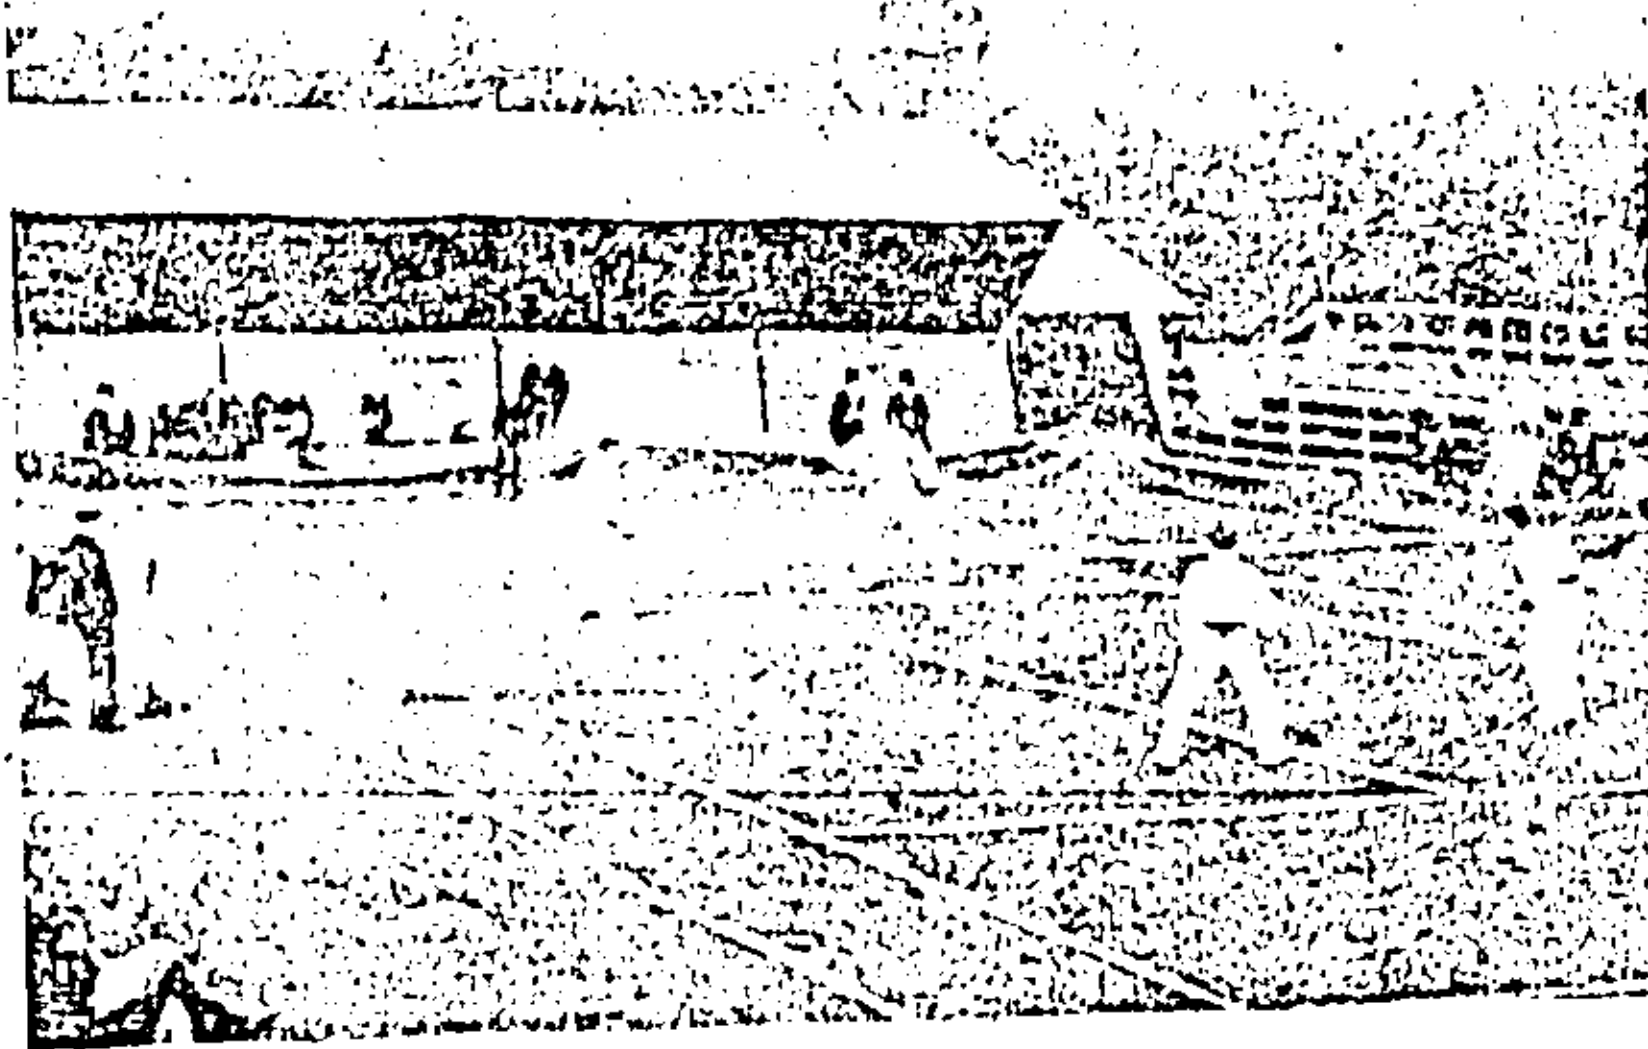

But Perry has only met the French "wizard" once within the last 18 months, when they opposed each other in the deciding match of the Davis Cup last year. Perry was, on that occasion,

Personally I have only one fear connected with Fred Perry. He has been playing first class tennis without a break for two years. Will the incessant demand upon his stamina during that period break down under the terrific strain of Wimbledon? Only his failure in Paris last month, when he lost to Boussus and Borotra in the England v France International match, has given any indication in this direction, though this, of course, must not be taken too seriously.

Perry is naturally endowed with splendid physique. So long as he has this advantage at his command, he must remain, with Cochet, the most serious and dangerous challenger for the Wimbledon title. That Perry will one day reach his goal, I have not the slightest doubt.

Will it be during the next fortnight?

THE WIMBLEDON CENTRE COURT IN 1891—

THIS WAS Wimbledon's Centre Court 41 years ago. The picture shows the all-comers final in the men's doubles in which Wilfred and Herbert Baddeley defeated H. S. Barlow and C. H. Martin.

beaten, but he demonstrated completely that he would be quite capable of turning the tables, and I think, after his experiences of the past winter, that should the two meet during the next fortnight, the Englishman will win.

PERRY'S NATURAL PROGRESS.

Perry is not only ambitious, but he has revealed his eager willingness to work in order to realise those ambitions. His progress, though sensational to the ordinary man in the street, has been, to the close observer, only the natural result of a severe course of training which he set himself. He thus, has at his command, all the vital qualities of a world-beater.

In stroke equipment he has nothing to learn from any of his opponents or contemporaries. It is doubtful if Lacoste can boast of a greater range of shots. Furthermore he has the ability to put them into effective operation. Though Perry himself admits that every time he goes on the centre court at Wimbledon he feels as nervous as a kitten, yet he also admits that such sensations vanish immediately the ball is in play, and so far as nervous reaction is concerned, the Englishman is as free as anybody.

Perry is made for the "big" occasion. He has schooled himself to like and appreciate big crowds; they offer no terrors to him. It is the same with players of big reputations: he welcomes their opposition; he has thrived on the experience of it; by such opposition he has made his game what it is to-day—one of the most complete to be found in any player.

WIMBLEDON PERSONALITIES.

Wimbledon this year promises to be one of the most attractive of post-war meetings, introducing as it does, one or two outstanding personalities who, heretofore, have not been seen in England. Chief among them is Ellsworth Vines, America's leading exponent, and the only player to really subjugate Perry, though this was accomplished on American courts.

Vines does not make his appearance at Wimbledon on a reputation of being potential. He has already proved himself. No one in the history of tennis has enjoyed such a meteoric rise to fame, and no player has more completely vindicated himself. If he and Perry do meet in the competition, it is going to be one of the greatest matches in history, offering possibly more excitement and entertainment than the famous Tilden-Cochet encounter of 1929.

The re-appearance of Jack Crawford from Australia, who, with Miss Ryan, won the Mixed Doubles championship two years ago, is a subject for no little speculation. Judging from Australian critics, Crawford is playing better now than ever before, because he is taking himself more seriously. In the past the main obstacle to Crawford realising the biggest honours in tennis has been his inability to take his game with the seriousness demanded on such occasions. His cheerful and "maskee" attitude has deprived him from many a victory. He possesses all the attributes of a champion, but whether or not he comes up to expectations in his quest for the title, Wimbledon is going to be a much brighter place for his appearance.

CHAPMAN OR JARDINE?

TO BE, OR NOT TO BE?

FRED PERRY, upon whom rests Britain's chief hopes of regaining the Wimbledon title last won by A. W. Gore in 1909. Perry is among the "seeded" players of the meeting which opens to-day.

FOR ENGLAND'S CAPTAINCY NEXT WINTER

A. M. CRAWLEY PUTS FORWARD "IDEAL SOLUTION"

WHY NOT PLAY BOTH OF THEM?

Facetious but rather ignorant people at Lord's the other day were having a lot of fun at the expense of the selectors, writes A. M. Crawley.

"What happens," they asked, "if Percy Chapman makes 180 not out and Jardine makes nothing? What do the pundits do then?"

The rain effectively spoilt any chance of either contingency but by the feeling that he will take place, and the situation which prompted the gibe—Chapman's being captain with Jardine in the side—had a very simple explanation.

MEMBERS' RIGHT.

Chapman is a member of the M.C.C. Committee and would automatically captain an M.C.C. side, unless a senior member of the committee were playing.

But, apart from this game the England captaincy is a very interesting problem.

It has become a problem only because of Chapman's sudden return to form as a batsman. A month ago there was no one to challenge Jardine's position as the outstanding amateur of the day and the only possible man to captain the side to be sent to Australia. Now Chapman is definitely in the picture.

No one who has played under Percy Chapman will deny that he has a very big personality on the cricket field. To begin with, he has a large experience of every kind of cricket, and taking it as a whole, a successful record as a captain.

That is a good background and helps to give the impression that he will always have a definite plan for any situation.

His greatest asset is undoubtedly his own batting. Even if his example will not carry the day by inspiring others to imitate his methods, you always have the feeling that he will deal with the situation in person, and that no one will get him out.

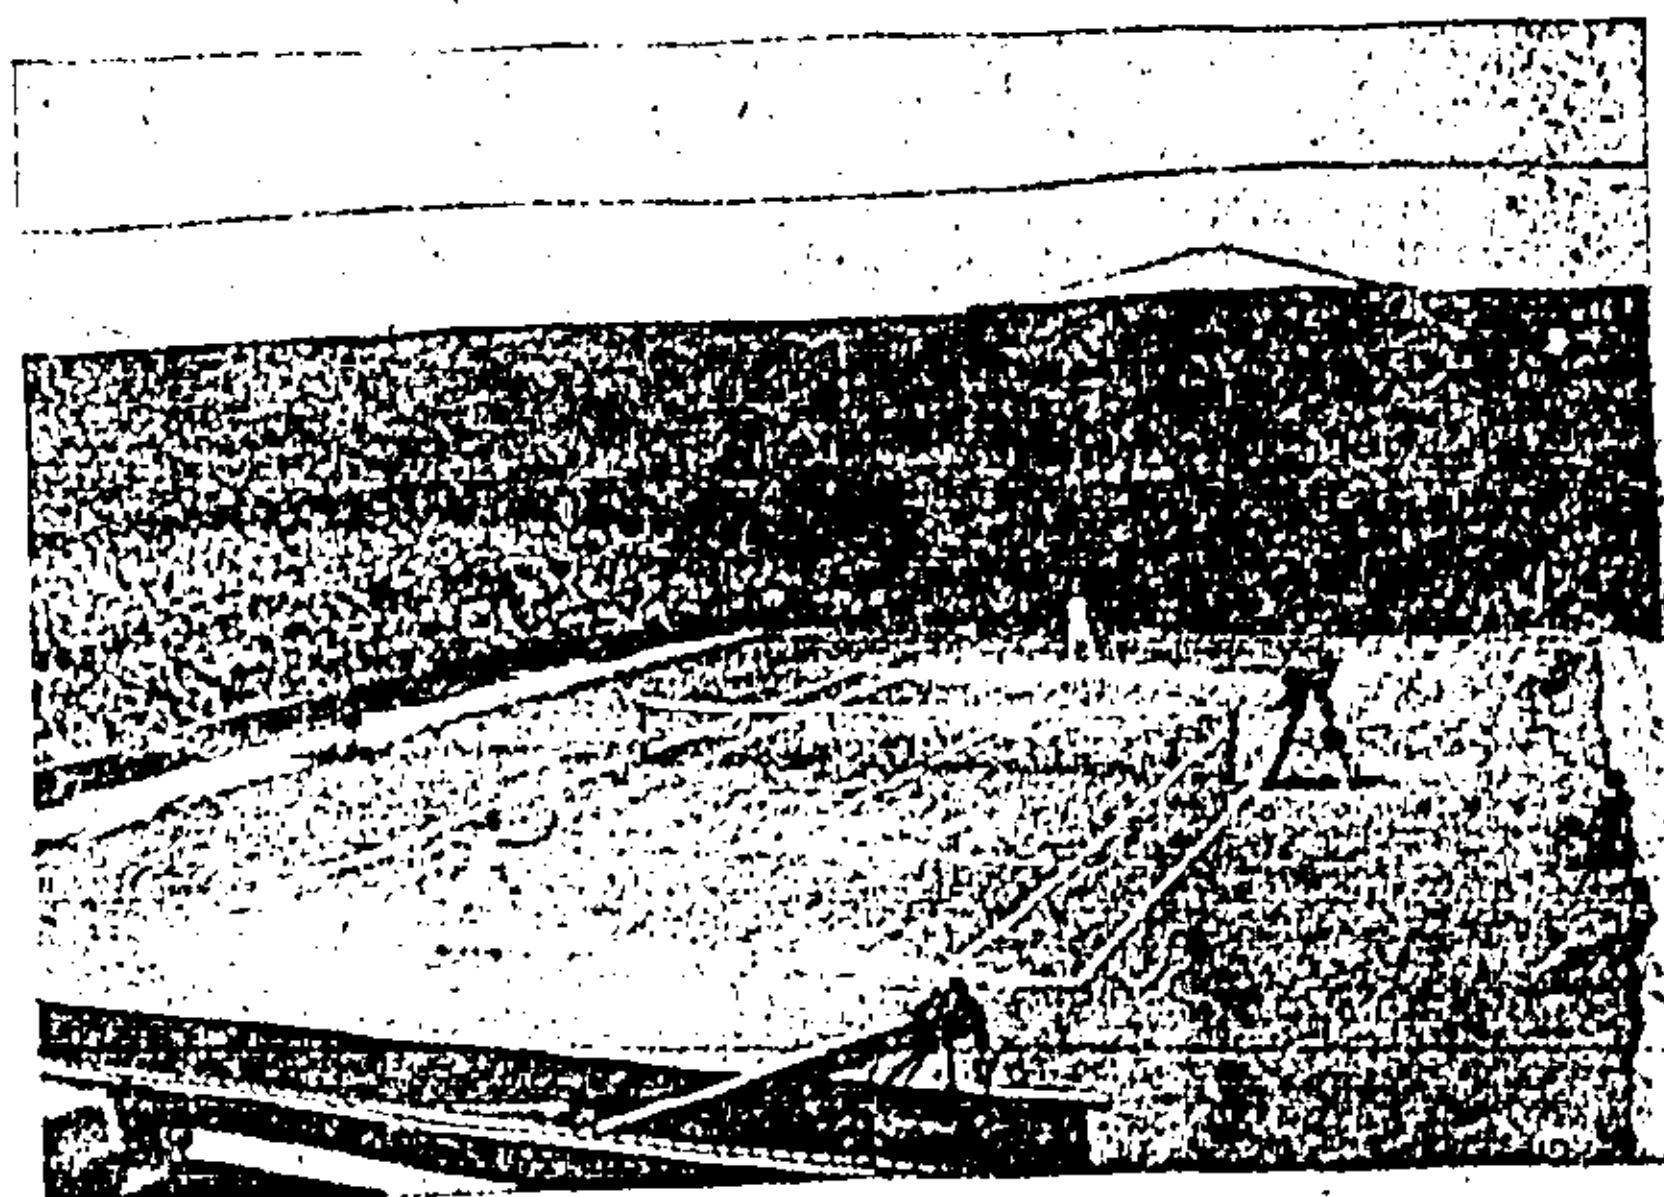

Also, there is always the pleasant suggestion about Jardine that he considers you just as capable of making runs as he is, which is most helpful, even if untrue.

He too is competent. I should describe Chapman as an opportunist on the field and Jardine as a strategist. Neither is ever at a loss.

Jardine does not electrify the men under him in the way Chapman does, but he gives the impression of having foreseen every possible situation, and of having thought out a way to meet it. This may be untrue, as it may be untrue of Chapman that he meets a situation as it comes, but it is the impression they have given to others besides myself, and that is all that concerns the people who play under them.

One other thing about Jardine. He would, I think, be tenacious to

—NOW WORLD'S MOST PERFECT TENNIS ARENA

SURROUNDED by stands and terraces, the Centre Court at Wimbledon to-day enjoys the reputation of being the finest and most perfect grass court in the world. It is a monument to the vast progress in popularity and importance enjoyed by the International meeting which starts to-day.

"A" DIVISION.

Surprise For Kowloon Cricket Club.

The Hongkong Cricket Club did well to hold the Kowloon C.C. on the latter's courts, the match ending in a tie, each side claiming 4½ sets. A. L. Sullivan and G. W. Sewell were the Club's outstanding pair, and their half point in the game against the two Finchers went a long way to providing the tie.

L. C. and E. F. Fincher (K.C.C.) tied with A. L. Sullivan and G. W. Sewell 6-6; beat D. Hazell and P. Grimble 6-3; beat C. Wright and W. Williams 6-3.

A. E. Guest and W. Hyde (K.C.C.) lost to Sullivan and Sewell 2-6; lost to Hazell and Grimble 4-6; beat Wright and Williams 6-2.

P. Madar and G. C. Burnett (K.C.C.) lost to Sullivan and Sewell 0-6; lost to Hazell and Grimble 1-6; beat Wright and Williams 6-1.

"B" DIVISION.

Crushing Defeat of Club de Recreo.

Playing on the home courts, the Chinese Recreation Club inflicted a heavy defeat on the Club de Recreo, who were their most serious rival last year. Li Wai-tong and Tsui Wai-pui proved a formidable combination for the winners, annexing all three sets. The final scores were eight sets to one.

Li Wai-tong and Tsui Wai-pui (C.R.C.) beat Remedios and Ribeiro 6-1; beat Barreto and Gosano 6-1; beat Barros and Remedios 6-3; beat Ng Kam-chuen and Choi Ping-fan (C.R.C.) beat Remedios and Ribeiro 6-4; beat Barreto and Gosano 7-5; lost to Barros and Remedios 6-7; lost to Chu Chun-chiu and W. C. Hung (C.R.C.) beat Remedios and Ribeiro (Continued on Page 9.)

WIMBLEDON FROM ZBW

Mr. Denis H. Hazell To Describe His Impressions.

Mr. Denis H. Hazell, the Somerset County tennis player, who also appeared at Wimbledon in 1930, is this evening giving a talk from the ZBW studio on his impressions of the All England Tennis Championships.

Mr. Hazell will not only explain the system of application for participation in the Championships, but also the method of eliminating the surplus entrants. His talk will be given at 7.30 p.m. about an hour before the Wimbledon meeting actually opens, and it promises to be of unusual interest and entertainment.

Chapman is competent. He may be right or wrong, but he is never at a loss, and that is an important factor in a captain, since it gives confidence.

But the secret of Chapman's personality does not lie in his experience, but in his play, and in my mind, more than anything, in his fielding.

To play under a captain who is always aggressive—"electric" is inspiring. Chapman in the field is like no one else playing cricket to-day. He dominates it. He is not only brilliant in any position in which he puts himself, but because he is just a little more brilliant than anyone would expect, he can put himself always in the most vital position and have a very definite effect on the batsman.

FRIGHTENING BATSMEN.

When he fields at "silly" point, for instance, the batsman knows that any shot within a most uncomfortable radius which is off the ground, and which is not going like a cannon ball, will be caught. He instinctively tries therefore either to keep the ball too rigidly on the ground or to hit far too hard, and is at once more likely to make a mistake.

Chapman in the field creates an atmosphere of attack and alertness which is a very great asset to bring to the captaincy. It breeds confidence, and confidence in a captain is half the battle.

Jardine's personality comes out in his batting. He is thoughtful, painstaking, and ruthlessly efficient. Ruthlessness is a very valuable asset when it is backed up by such a superb technique as Jardine's. He inspires confidence

the very last degree, and would revel in the long-drawn-out fights in Australia.

Chapman has already been successful in them, so it would be absurd to question his capabilities in play-to-a-finish cricket. But there is something in Jardine's attitude of perpetual attrition which would be very comforting in a tight corner.

The situation as I see it amounts to this: Chapman is a great captain of proved ability, with a personality on the cricket field the value of which it is hard to underestimate. As a batsman, however, he has not been in the first class for several years now, and unless his recent innings have shown a real return to sound methods, he would constitute a grave weakness in our batting order.

THE IDEAL SOLUTION.

Jardine is also outstanding personality, with many qualities which may go to make a very great captain. He lacks Chapman's experience of captaincy, but has the invaluable asset of being the greatest batsman in England to-day.

The ideal solution would be that both men should be in the side, and if Chapman does reproduce his old form with the bat I believe that Jardine would be only too happy to play under him.

But no part of a game is easy to learn, and Chapman may find it very hard to be consistent. In which case we cannot be too thankful that there are two men so well qualified to fill one post and that ours is not the responsibility of choosing between them.

OBITUARY

MR. WOO HAY-TONG DIES FROM WOUNDS

Mr. Woo Hay-tong, the well known local millionaire shipping owner, who was shot by his nephew, Chan Fook, in the Chinese freight department of the B. and S. Office on Friday afternoon, died at the Government Civil Hospital on Saturday evening shortly before mid-night despite the best medical attention.

An operation was performed to extract the two bullets. Death was due to collapse from heart weakness. Deceased was 58 years old and had suffered severe loss of blood.

The death of Mr. Woo Hay-tong will be regretted by a large circle of relatives and friends. He was a self-made man, of moderate habits and simple tastes. His connexion with Messrs. Butterfield and Swire dates for some thirty years. Mr. Woo Hay-tong entered the Taikoo office as a shipping clerk at a monthly salary of $40. He showed great interest in his work and this together with his genial disposition won for him an affection which contributed much to his success in later life.

After many promotions he was made chief of the Chinese freight department and appointed Chinese Shipping Comptroller only last year.

As Farmer of Steamers.

In the year 1918 or 1919 the late Mr. Woo Hay-tong leased the Chinese freight and passenger business of the Canton-Hongkong vessel owned by the Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamboat Company. These river steamers were operated with the B. and S. vessel Fatshan, the two companies being associated in the river enterprise. Mr. Woo Hay-tong's arrangement continued until the expiration of his contract in 1930, when on the suggestion of Sir Robert Ho Tung and fellow directors of the Steamboat Company, the latter decided to operate its steamers on its own account.

The late Mr. Woo Hay-tong appeared to have made good profits out of his operation of these steamers, and in recent years he became an increasingly important shipping figure, ordering steamers built for himself. He started the Tung On Shipping Company which built the s.s. Tung On and s.s. Sai On and in addition ran four other steamers on the Hongkong-Canton and Canton-Macao runs.

Real Estate Owner.

The late Mr. Woo Hay-tong was also interested in real estate and share transactions. He is reported to have been worth $7,000,000.

In his later years he contributed much to education and gave, among other donations, $100,000 for the provision of scholarships in local schools.

He was made a J.P. for his public work in Hongkong on June 1.

Apart from his interest in shipping and real estate businesses the late Mr. Woo Hay-tong was also financially connected with a few of the leading rattan furniture manufacturing companies here.

The late Mr. Woo Hay-tong is survived by his wife, five sons, Messrs. Woo Pak-fook, Woo Pak-shau, Woo Pak-chuen, Woo Pak-foo and Woo Pak-kwai and several daughters. He also left behind him two brothers, Messrs. H. K. Woo, LL.B., well known local solicitor of the legal firm of Woo and Nash, and Woo Hang-dok, who resides in Macao.

Among Mr. Woo's sons, the eldest one, Mr. Woo Pak-fook was at one time connected with the firm of architects, Messrs. Denison, Ram and Gibbs, but joined his father's freight department. Two of the five sons worked in the law office of Messrs. Woo and Nash, while the others are still in school.

MR. WOO PAK-LUK.

Memorial Service At Kwong Wah Hospital.

The funeral of the late Mr. Woo Pak-luk, 30 years old, the second son of Mr. Woo Hay-tong, the first victim of the sensational shooting tragedy on Friday, was held yesterday afternoon, when the cortege left the Kwong Wah Hospital at about two o'clock. The deceased was well known in the local clubs and his funeral was attended by many friends and relatives. The chief mourners included his wife, a son and a daughter.

Among the friends present were Messrs. W. C. Bailey, J. R. Mason, J. D. Danby, J. D. Bush, Wong Tak-kwong, Mok Lin, Fung Kuei-yin, P. C. Kwok, H. S. Mok and many others.

There was a brief service held at the Kwong Wah Hospital, by Rev. Mr. Lam and attended by the friends of the deceased. Interment was at the Kowloon Christian Cemetery.

OBSTRUCTING POLICE.

CHINESE YOUTH FINED AT KOWLOON

For having obstructed a police officer in the performance of his duty, a Chinese, Ma Lam, was fined $150 or in default two months' imprisonment, by Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy on Saturday.

Sub-Inspector Baker said that he was on duty about 12.30 a.m. on Saturday morning in Jordan Road on the look-out for street walkers. He saw a woman, who was known to him as a prostitute, walking along the road. The accused came up and joined her. Later he saw the Chinese detective, whom he had posted on the other side of the road, following the couple. He saw the detective run to arrest the accused, who tried to get away but was caught. Later, on the detective's statement, he sent the accused to the Yau-matui police station.

A Chinese detective stated that he was following the couple for a short distance. He saw the accused point towards the woman, who was a police officer, and told the woman he was a police officer, and asked her to quit. Witness then laid a hand on the accused, who tried to get away. He arrested the accused.

Defendant said that he was walking home, when he saw the woman, who was known to him. He engaged in conversation with her, and was pointing out a restaurant to her when the Chinese detective arrested him. He denied warning the woman that a police officer was near-by.

Mr. Fraser convicted the defendant and imposed a fine, remarking that he had chosen a nasty profession for a livelihood.

MOTOR MISHAPS.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT ON THE CASTLE PEAK ROAD

An accident which was attended by peculiar circumstances was reported to the Police by the driver of a motor lorry who was towing a motor car along the Castle Peak Road.

The driver, Li Sam, of Portland Street stated that at about noon on Friday he was driving motor lorry 3149 in the vicinity of Castle Peak. He was towing a private car and at one stage during the journey he attempted to pass a stationary motor bus. As he was about to pass he observed another bus coming in the opposite direction and was forced to apply his brakes suddenly to avoid a collision.

The motor car which was being towed, however, collided heavily with the rear of the lorry and was badly damaged.

Another Collision.

Mr. Edward L. Curtis, of 7, Nanking Street, has reported to the Police an accident in which he and a Chinese lady were involved.

Mr. Curtis was driving his car along Tam Kung Road, in the Hunghom District, proceeding in the direction of Kowloon City on Saturday afternoon. When passing Mok Ching Street private car No. 2281, driven by a Chinese lady, came out of Mok Ching Street and the two vehicles came in collision.

LESSON SERMON.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST, HONGKONG

"Is the universe, including man, evolved by atomic force?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, yesterday.

The Golden Text was—"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." (Psalm 19: 1).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible. "I will sing of the mercies of the Lord for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations. And the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O Lord: thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints. The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine; as for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them." (Psalm 89: 1, 5, 11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy—"The compounded minerals or aggregated substances composing the earth, the relations which constitute masses hold to each other, the magnitudes, the distances, and revolutions of the celestial bodies, are of no real importance, when we remember that they all must give place to the spiritual fact and the universe of man and the universe of spirit. In proportion as this is done, man and the universe will be found harmonious and eternal (p. 209).

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

MEETING TO DECIDE IF CHANGES ARE NEEDED

A meeting was held in the St. Andrew's Church Hall yesterday morning just after the morning service, with the object of testing the feeling of the congregation as to the advisability of making changes both as to the times of the morning and evening services and the length and order of services and sermons.

The Rev. W. Walton Rogers, Vicar of St. Andrew's, presided, and with him on the platform were Mr. J. W. Baldwin and Mr. W. H. Robson, Church Wardens, and Mr. J. H. Hunt, Hon. Secretary.

It was thought by the Church Council that certain changes might be made in the directions indicated, with advantage, though it would not be true to say that attendances generally had been falling off more than is usual at this time of year.

A report prepared by a sub-committee, which had been appointed some weeks ago to make a survey, was read out to the congregation, with its recommendations by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Hunt.

Various suggestions were put forward by the body of the meeting and these recommendations will be put to the monthly meeting of the Church Council to-day. The Council's decision will be made known to the congregation and the general public as soon as possible.

MURDER IN A FLAT

MRS. ELVIRA BARNEY MUST STAND TRIAL.

London, June 18.

Mrs. Elvira Barney, wife of Mr. John Sterling Barney, the American singer, and daughter of Sir John Mullens, has been committed for trial on the two charges made against her, first of the murder of Mr. Michael Scott Stephen on May 31, and second of shooting at Mr. Stephen with intent to do grievous bodily harm on May 19.

The killing of Mr. Stephen occurred at Mrs. Barney's flat in London, following a cocktail party and after a quarrel between the two. Mr. Barney is represented by Sir Patrick Hastings, K.C.

The police court hearing has been held at Westminster. As on previous days, again large crowds tried to gain admittance to the court room.

Mrs. Barney was dressed in black with white gardenias in her hat. She continually clutched a bottle of smelling salts.

Emotional Scenes.

There were emotional scenes when Mrs. Barney was committed for trial. She sobbed without restraint when her counsel, Sir Patrick Hastings, read out two of her passionate love letters to Mr. Stephen, one of which had "Love Hut" as its address.

Detective Inspector Winter dramatically gave evidence to the effect that when he and Detective Sergeant Champion visited Mrs. Barney's flat after the tragedy she ordered him from the house and struck the sergeant in the face, crying "I'll teach you to put me in a cell, you vile swine." She subsequently apologized, however.

Mrs. Barney sobbed again when Sir Bernard Spilsbury examined Mr. Stephen's bullet-ridden pull-over, and expressed the opinion that it was most unlikely that the wound could have been self-inflicted, or that the revolver could have been discharged during a struggle such as Mrs. Barney had described. — Reuter.

LAWN BOWLS LEAGUE

CIVIL SERVICE CONTINUE WINNING CAREER

SATURDAY'S GAMES

The defeat of the Kowloon C.C. at the hands of the Civil Service has now definitely established the Happy Valley players as joint favourites with the Craignower C.C. for the premier honours of the season. The present leaders had a margin of 17 shots in their favour and they thus won their fifth consecutive match. Craignower C.C. won from Talkoo by 10 shots, the Club de Recreio scored a narrow victory against the Kowloon B.G.C. and the Kowloon Dock beat the Police by the narrowest possible margin.

FIRST DIVISION.

Defeat of the Kowloon C.C. By Civil Service.

The Civil Service C.C. repeated their success of last year when they beat the champions, the Kowloon C.C., at Happy Valley. The present League leaders won on Saturday by 17 shots.

Scores: E. W. Simmonds, J. W. Deakin, F. J. Jones and A. W. Grimmit (Civil Service) beat Gittins, E. Kern, J. Gibson and R. Lapley 26-17. N. J. Hebbington, H. Westlake, L. E. Longbottom and J. Hollidge (Civil Service) beat H. Hampton, F. Goodwin, A. Hyde-Lay and J. Hyde 22-11. S. Randle, S. Alderman, A. H. Osweick and J. J. Gregory (Civil Service) lost to F. T. Farrell, A. C. Burford, H. McFarish and J. C. Lyal 16-19.

Talkoo v. Craignower.

Winning on all rinks, the Craignower C.C. beat the Talkoo R.C. at Talkoo by 19 shots. Scores: G. McLeod, J. Sloan, J. Chapman and D. Munro (Talkoo) lost to W. T. Brightman, A. F. Contes, E. J. Acrell and U. M. Omar 22-24. J. Watson, D. S. Bone, W. Weir and W. Wetherpoon (Talkoo) lost to G. Buchanan, M. O'Brien, C. S. Rossett and R. Bass 17-22. A. Stalker, J. Polson, C. Matthews and J. Russell (Talkoo) lost to M. Souza, L. E. Lammert, D. Rumlajn and B. W. Bradbury 11-23.

Recreio v. Bowling Green.

Always a difficult team to beat on their own green, the Club de Recreio gave further evidence of their strength when playing at home by defeating the Kowloon B.G.C. by three shots. Scores:

F. V. Ribeiro, J. M. Alves, F. X. Silva and L. A. Guterres (Recreio) lost to R. Duncan, D. Phillips, R. Nichol and A. M. Holland 16-22. F. Xavier, R. Roberts, A. S. Gomes, and R. F. Luz (Recreio) drew with G. N. Mitchell, A. K. Taylor, J. G. Meyer and A. M. Holland 21-21. H. A. Alves, P. A. Yvanovich, L. C. R. Souza and C. G. Silva (Recreio) beat H. E. Stenham, J. S. Logan, C. S. Beat and W. Russell 29-20.

Police v. Kowloon Dock.

On their own green the Police R.C. lost to the Kowloon Dock by a single shot. Scores:

E. Post, J. R. McWalter, A. N. Reynolds and W. E. Hollands (Police) lost to G. Docherty, R. Morrison K. Greig and J. McKelvie 18-24. W. McLeod, W. Glendinning, D. Clow and J. Moss (Police) beat J. V. Ramsay, R. G. Craig, J. Lindsay and J. C. Brown 18-13.

Police v. Kowloon Dock.

little, mushroom houses of the truck gardeners huddled together. They passed a cemetery, the white stones arising up eerily in the room.

"Tired, sweetie?" Susan shook her head. The man's fingers gripped her slender arm. "You're a nice kid and I like you but you're only half alive. Come to and enjoy yourself. Don't be a crepe hanger!"

She said, "I'm sorry you think I spoiled everything." His voice thickened, blurred again. "We'll paint the town some time. You'd be grand if you'd just let yourself go."

Susan scarcely heard him. She was counting the blocks now. Eight, six, four—they were almost home.

"The next corner," she murmured, turning to Waring. Now that the dreadful evening was ended she was almost effusive. To be home, safe and sound, seemed too good to be true!

"Don't bother to get out with me," she said hurriedly. She could see Rose's figure, a mere blur, on the porch. Poor Rose! There would have to be a great deal of explaining.

Before Susan could open the car door and slip away she felt strong arms around her, a mouth pressed to hers.

"Good night, sweet child!" Jack Waring murmured.

Susan tore herself away, shaking in every limb.

Oh, she hated him, she hated him for doing that!

drew with A. Calman, J. Kempton, H. A. Cooper and F. Cullen 16-16.

SECOND DIVISION.

Leaders Win Fifth Match in Succession on Saturday.

The Craignower C.C. have increased their advantage over their nearest rivals by a victory against Talkoo when they beat by ten shots at Happy Valley. Scores:

Medina, Y. Abina, W. Ward and M. A. Razack (Craignower) beat D. Peoples, J. Waid, T. Grimes and H. McKee 22-19.

C. Summons, F. K. Modi, A. V. Barros and J. Cavanagh (Craignower) beat Greenwood, T. Swan, A. MacIndoe, and S. Hope 19-16.

Kowloon v. Civil Service.

Playing at Kowloon, the Civil Service C.C. won their match against the Kowloon Cricket Club by 17 shots. Scores:

F. E. Skinner, W. W. Hirst, F. E. Lawrence and J. Jack (Kowloon C.C.) lost to H. Lockhart, L. T. Whant, T. Holden and S. Beechall 18-25.

J. S. Dinnery, W. Harrison, L. J. Blackburn and F. G. Herdridge (Kowloon C.C.) lost to T. Armstrong, P. E. Knight, T. F. McGowan and D. W. Phillips 16-22.

W. Edmonds, A. J. Kew, T. W. Carr and L. Jack (Kowloon C.C.) lost to C. Strange, C. J. Tatchi, L. Luck and A. O. Brown 21-24.

Kowloon B.G.C. v. Recreio.

The Kowloon Bowling Green Club defeated the Club de Recreio on the former's green by 24 shots. Scores:

S. Ashworth, F. V. Whitta, T. Gooding and H. H. Rose (Kowloon B.G.C.) beat F. Prata, L. F. Xavier, J. J. Basto and A. H. Basto 20-8.

CHINESE PLAN FOR SETTLEMENT

Nanking, June 18.

Dr. Wellington Koo arrived by air from Shanghai and immediately motored to the Officers' Moral Endeavour Association to attend a meeting of Government leaders.

Dr. Wellington Koo, Mr. Wang Ching-wei and Mr. Lo Wen-kun are leaving for Peking at noon to discuss certain important questions with Chang Hauch-liang.

Dr. Wellington Koo, interviewed by Reuter at the Aviation Field, said that the Lytton Commission are leaving for Japan next Thursday or Friday and will remain there for three weeks; the Commission will then return to Peking to draft the report. Thereafter some members of the Commission will leave for Geneva, while other members will remain in Peking for a longer period.

Mr. Soong Joins Party.

Later. Mr. T. V. Soong was among the party which left for Peking.

The journey is being made in Chang Hauch-liang's giant Ford plane. Other passengers on board the plane included the Minister for Railways, Mr. Taeng Chung-min.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei declared that they intended to discuss with the Lytton Commission a comprehensive scheme for a settlement of the Sino-Japanese issue.

Dr. Wellington Koo, when interviewed by Reuter, said that he is leaving for Japan with the Commission. — Reuter.

Frank Opinions.

Peking, June 19.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei, Dr. Wellington Koo, Mr. T. V. Soong and Mr. Lo Wen-kun had a prolonged conference with the Lytton commissioners this morning and they lunched together. The Chinese leaders thanked the Commissioners for their lengthy travels and serious efforts to obtain facts regarding Manchuria.

It is stated that the conversations were important and frank opinions were expressed, but details were kept a secret. The Commissioners will meet the Chinese leaders again to-morrow morning. — Reuter.

WAR ON REDS

ATTEMPT TO HOLD UP
A TRAIN FAILS

Hankow, June 19.
The plan of a body of Communists to seize a supply of ammunition carried on a freight train to Peking from Hankow yesterday was frustrated when Government forces put them to flight.

Removing the bolts from the fishplates on the railway near Wangchiatan, the Communists derailed the freight train with the result that the locomotive and six cars were wrecked. When the Communists were about to loot the train the Government troops put in an appearance and dispersed them.

A breakdown gang was hurried to the scene of the derailment and effected repairs.

It is reported that Government troops were worsted by the "Reds" in a severe engagement near Shanai on Friday.—Reuter.

DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

CHINESE GUNMEN RAID CITY
IMPORT FIRM.

Entering a Chinese import and export firm at No. 35, Cornhaught Road, Central, second floor, by the false pretence of paying a bill, three Chinese armed with a revolver and daggers, committed a robbery yesterday about 1.30 p.m. and decamped with Hongkong bank notes and American coins totalling worth $22,230.

The only occupant of the premises at the time was Lam Sittung, 33, who reported to the Police that the robbers overpowered and tied him up, after gagging him with a towel. He was put in one of the cubicles when the gunmen forced him to produce his key for the safe. The notes were taken from the safe, after which the robbers left.

MURDER SUSPECTED.

BODY WASHED UP AT 13 MILE BEACH

The police on the mainland are investigating a case of suspected murder, consequent on the discovery made by a Chinese fisherman, of a dead body of a middle-aged Chinese, found with the legs and arms tied together with rough twine, on the shore near the 13-Mile Beach on Saturday.

The discovery was reported to the Police and a party set out immediately but when it arrived, there was no trace of the body. It is thought that the tide may have washed it away, although it is possible that the murderers may have heard of the Police arrival, and removed the body.

MURDER AND SUICIDE AT SHANGHAI.

BANK EMPLOYEES' FATAL QUARREL

Shanghai, June 18.
The dead body of Mr. Rodney Keeler Heim, an American, 25 years of age, unemployed, formerly with the American Oriental Bank, was found in a field off Lincoln Avenue yesterday afternoon with bullet wounds in the head and chest.

Last evening the American authorities issued a warrant for the arrest of John Martin Hansen, an American, also unemployed, formerly employed at the same bank, on a charge of murder in the first degree.

So far no arrest has been effected.

According to evidence in the hands of the police Mr. Heim was shot in a motor truck and his body was dumped along the road.

The Chinese driver has been identified Hansen by his photograph as the other occupant of the truck which was hired from the French-town garage shortly before noon.
Despite a thorough search, no trace has been found of Hansen.

It appears that two foreigners proceeded to the garage at 11.40 a.m. yesterday and the one who hired the truck was Hansen, who explained that he wished to drive to the railway station in the vicinity of Hungjiao to collect some luggage.

Both the deceased and Hansen sat in the front seat with the driver. Heim was in the centre with Hansen on the outside.
Acting under instructions from Hansen the truck proceeded to Great Western Road but when a point near Lincoln Avenue was reached Hansen gave instructions to proceed along the latter road.

After crossing Warren Road and proceeding west in the direction of Rubien Road, Hansen is alleged to have placed his hand inside his coat pocket at the same time drawing the attention of Heim and the chauffeur to something on the roadside. Simultaneously a report rang out and Heim slumped in his seat. Hansen ordered the truck to be stopped and with the aid of the chauffeur assisted Heim into the back of the open truck and instructions were given to the driver to proceed ahead and get a doctor.

About two or three hundred yards farther on the driver was ordered to stop. Doing so he looked out from the driving seat and found Heim was missing and Hansen alone in the truck.

After instructing the chauffeur to drive on, himself alighting, Hansen proceeded to walk. The chauffeur returned to the garage and reported the incident.
Meanwhile a Chinese youth found the body in an open field about twenty feet from the roadside, exposed to the view of passers by.

There was a bullet wound in his chest and another in his head, his brains being practically blown out. It is believed that the body had been dragged from the

BOMB SENSATION

FOUND UNDER PLATFORM AT SCHOOL.

London, June 19.
A sensation was caused last night by the discovery of a bomb
under the platform from which Lord Lloyd and the Bishop of Carlisle were addressing the boys
of St. Bee's School, Cumberland.
The bomb was timed to explode
during the ceremony.
A slight report was heard, and
it is believed that the detonator went off, but failed to explode the charge.

The Cumberland Chief Constable immediately telephoned to Scotland Yard, which sent an expert to examine the bomb. It is thought to be too well-made to be the work of a practical joker.

Hansen arrived from Tientsin a few days ago, having recently been dismissed from the bank.
He was booked to sail to-day for the two quarrelled recently.

Both lived together in Tientsin,

GERMANY'S PERIL

NAZI RIOTS IN MUNICH

PAIDEMONIUM REIGNS

BAVARIAN DECREE DEFIED

Picture shows a mass demonstration by the Nazis.

PLANNED UPROAR
Munich, June 19.
Pandemonium reigned in the main streets of the Bavarian capital for over two hours this morning when over five thousand Nazi storm-troops in uniforms (defying the ban of the State Government) demonstrated in front of the Premier's residence.

The incident was the first of a series of alarming developments occurring during the day. Grave riots were frequent and many arrests were made. The Government is taking strong action against the Hitlerites and raids have been made upon the residences of well-known sympathisers.

TWO HUNDRED ARRESTS.
Over two hundred of the Nazis were arrested this morning as a result of the disturbance outside the Premier's residence. The police guarding the house were heavily reinforced, the Nazis refused to obey orders to disperse and the police were ordered to charge the crowd.

Some brisk fighting occurred in the course of which over twenty of the demonstrators were seriously injured and scores were badly knocked about. The police used batons and finally succeeded in dispersing the crowd.

That this scene was not the sole enterprise of the Fascist mob made itself plain. The situation grew more and more threatening as the day wore on and finally orders were issued by the State Government for the Reichswehr, the German army stationed in Bavaria, to stand to ready for any emergency.

The order was issued in consequence of the very ugly developments.

ORGANISED RIOTS.
Riots occurred all over the city and several points at once and were evidently being deliberately organised. The methods of the rioters revealed that their activities were well-planned and the incidents were evidently intended as a serious challenge to the State Government, which persists in its refusal to permit the Hindenburg decree authorising the wearing of uniforms by the Nazi storm-troops to take effect in Bavaria.

Since this morning, over 470 arrests of Nazis have been effected, those taken into custody including the aristocrats, Prince Josias Waldeck, Count Schwerin and Count Preti.—Reuter.

HITLER IN HESSE.
Berlin, June 19.
In alliance with the Social Democrats, Hitler will now have command of the Government of Hesse. The final figures of the Hesse general elections show that the Hitlerites have obtained 32 out of 70 seats, while the Social Democrats have gained two and now hold seventeen seats. The Centre only retained ten.—Reuter.

In a race over the distance of three thousand metres to-day, Kucocinski, the Polish runner, beat the world's record for the distance set up by Paavo Nurmi. Kucocinski's time was 8 minutes, 18 4/5ths seconds, which compares with Nurmi's 8 minutes, 20 4/5ths seconds.—Reuter.

RELIGIOUS FERVOUR SCENES

PAPAL LEGATE IN LONDON

(Reuter's Special Service.)
London, June 19.
One of the most impressive demonstrations of religious fervour witnessed in England occurred to-day on the passage through London of Cardinal Lauri, the Pope's representative at the Eucharistic Congress in Dublin.

Thousands of Roman Catholics of all classes and ages gathered at Olympia where the Cardinal's special train from Folkestone to Holyhead stopped at Addison Road station to change engines. As the train stopped, the huge multitude began to sing "God Bless the Pope" and there was loud cheering when the white-haired Cardinal stepped out of his carriage.

The multitude fell upon its knees and received the Blessing. The Cardinal returned the Blessing. The result is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that in the last Parliament under Mr.

EXTRAORDINARY SCENES.
Extraordinary scenes of enthusiasm followed. Men and women fought and struggled to kiss the ring on the Cardinal's finger and others knelt to kiss his robes.

POLITICS OBTRUDE.
Dublin, June 20.
Religious fervour is rising in Ireland with the approach of the Eucharistic Congress. Pilgrims are streaming in from all over the world at the rate of five thousand a day.

There are colourful displays in the streets, interspersed with altars and shrines. The city is like a gigantic cathedral. A light political note, however, obtrudes. Among the unparallelled blaze of universal national colours, the Union Jack is absent, while British visitors complain that the Governor-General is alone among the local personages not invited to the State Reception of the Papal Legate.—Reuter.

Women cried and laughed and sang. Men shouted and wept. There was a risk of the Cardinal being crushed by the mob of devotees but the police assisted him back to his train.

DUBLIN PLANS.
On June 26, it is expected that Dublin will witness one of the most remarkable displays of religious enthusiasm seen in Ireland. It will be the concluding day of the Eucharistic Congress which will extend with a series of functions over the coming week. For various reasons, chiefly economic, delegations which were expected from distant parts of the world, will be fewer than originally estimated. This, however, the promoters believe will not affect success of the Congress on the whole, but will lessen the strain on those in charge of the arrangements.

MILLION AT MASS.
The Congress will be Ireland's biggest event, and given good weather the concluding open-air ceremonies in the Phoenix Park, when High Mass will be celebrated by the Papal Legate in the presence of not less than a million people, will be impressive in the extreme. Following the Mass a procession will be formed in which all the contingents will march to the centre of the city, where, from one of the bridges across the Liffey, Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will be given. The Sacred Host will be borne at the head of the procession under a canopy carried by laymen representatives of the entire Irish people. President de Valera, Mr. W. T. Cosgrave, ex-President, the Lord Chief Justice, the Mayors of Irish cities, and representatives of the Parliament of Northern Ireland, will be included.

AIR GREETING.
Dublin Bay, from Dublin to Dun Laoghaire, is dotted with liners from America, North and South, and from various Continental

OPPOSITION GAINS 29 SEATS

N. S. W. ELECTION

Sydney, June 19.
The final results of the general elections in New South Wales, following the dismissal of the Labour Premier, Mr. Jack Lang, give the following distribution of seats in the new Parliament:

United Australia Party	41
Country Party	23
Labour	24
Unity Party	2

The United Australia and Country Parties have gained no fewer than 29 seats. The debacle of Langism is thus complete.

NEW PREMIER.

Mr. B. S. B. Stevens will form a Coalition Administration, the Country Party supporting the United Australia Party, which will have an overwhelming majority, the two parties having secured twice as many as the Opposition parties.

The result is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that in the last Parliament under Mr.

Mr. B. S. B. Stevens, the new Premier of New South Wales and (right) Mr. J. T. Lang, the Socialist, whose policy led to a party collapse.

Lang's Premiership, the figures were Labour Government, 55, Opposition 35.

A Labour majority of 20 has been turned into a minority of 38!—Reuter.

GENERAL RELIEF IN AUSTRALIA

TASMANIAN PREMIER INTERVIEWED.

That the policy of Mr. Lang had prejudiced the whole of Australia in the eyes of the world and created a lack of confidence on the part of investors in Australia and overseas, was the opinion expressed this morning by the Hon. Mr. J. C. McPhee, the Premier of Tasmania, when interviewed by a Telegraph representative.

Mr. McPhee, who is accompanied by two well-known Melbourne business men, is on a health trip to the Far East, having arrived here via the Dutch East Indies. He returns to Australia by the s.s. Changste tomorrow.

BRIGHTER OUTLOOK.

Commenting on the political situation in Australia, Mr. McPhee said: "Now that the Lang Government has been so overwhelmingly defeated, and the people of N.S.W. have shown in a most definite way that they have no sympathy with his policy, the prospects for the rehabilitation of Australia are decidedly brighter. In Victoria, just a few weeks previously, the people likewise showed their disapproval of Labour policies by dismissing the Hogan administration."

"The prospects of a sane policy of economy and development on stable lines being put into operation in New South Wales are now extremely favourable," he added.

BUSINESS HOPES.

"I feel certain that a large Australian trade connexion can be established with the Far East," said Mr. McPhee in discussing the business outlook. Mr. McPhee was impressed with the volume of trade between Australia and the Dutch East Indies. On the boat in which he travelled to Java was a shipment of 15,000 cases of Australian fruit.

WAR AFTERMATH

LIVE SHELL EXPLODES

SHOP WRECKED IN SHANGHAI

GIVEN TO CHILDREN TO BREAK UP

Shanghai, June 20.
The peril of war trophy collection was again tragically demonstrated to-day when a terrific explosion occurred in a Settlement shop, injuring four, one dangerously.

The origin of the explosion was a live shell, which the owner of the shop had brought back with other relics from the war-torn area and

Had given them to his children with instructions to break up the articles for future sale as scrap metal.

LEG BLOWN OFF.
One of the children struck the detonator. There was a terrific explosion, completely wrecking the shop.

The victims were the three children of the owner and a youth of nineteen. One of the children is not expected to live.

One child had its leg blown off. All the others sustained terrible injuries.

The owner of the shop had been known to be collecting junk from shell-stricken Chapei and he had been especially warned against the danger of taking up possible live shells and bombs. He had, apparently, ignored the warnings, however, and then entrusted children with the task of breaking the articles up.—Reuter.

SANITARY BOARD QUESTIONS

At to-morrow's meeting of the Sanitary Board, Mr. M. K. Lo will raise the question of the nuisance caused by the removal of refuse by lorries during the day-time, suggesting that this work might be done at night.

Mr. Lo's question is as follows: "Will the Head of the Sanitary Department be good enough to make a statement, for the information of the Board, showing the arrangements now in force for the removal of refuse by refuse lorries; in particular showing the time at which the lorries go round in the city and residential districts for the collection of refuse and explaining why—if such be the fact—the removal of refuse could not, like the removal of night soil, take place at night?"

"In the statement will the Head of the Sanitary Department state what precautions are being taken to minimise the nuisance caused by lorries, filled to capacity with refuse, going through busy thoroughfares, and whether any instructions have been issued to the officers in charge of the lorries not to station the lorries for the purpose of refuse collection, outside, ten or eating houses or shops in which food is exposed for sale?"

"If no such instructions have been given, will the Head of the Sanitary Department consider the advisability of issuing the same?"

POLICE DOUBT REPORT

SEQUEL TO ALLEGED ROBBERY

A report of an armed robbery which was made by Lam Siu-tung, of the Wai San import and exports firm, of Connaught Road, is regarded by the police as being doubtful, and following enquiries which were made immediately afterwards, the master of the firm has been detained.

Lam Siu-tung, the master, alleged that at 1.30 p.m. yesterday three men, one armed with a revolver and two with daggers, entered his premises. After he was bound and gagged, money totalling $2,239 was alleged to have been stolen.

The police conducted enquiries immediately the report was received and during the course of their investigations a $10 note which was included in the missing money is said to have been found concealed in the master's stocking.

JOURNALIST UNDER THIRD DEGREE

JAPANESE ACTS IN HARBIN

DIPLOMATIC STIR CREATED

Shanghai, June 20.
The Steele-Lindt affair is creating a considerable diplomatic stir in Harbin and it is believed that strong words have passed between Consular representatives and the Japanese authorities.

It is revealed that while Dr. A. R. Lindt, the correspondent in China of the Deutsche Argemone Zeitung, was under arrest and was undergoing six hours of third degree in the hands of the Japanese police, his hotel room was raided and all his papers were seized.

The French Consul, acting for Switzerland, Dr. Lindt being a Swiss, is demanding the restoration of all the papers seized.

The Japanese are taking a very high-handed view of the incident and it is thought likely that they will refuse. Their attitude is that they had no knowledge of the proposed visit to General Ma Chan-shan, the anti-Manchukuo general, and suggest that the adventure might be so construed as to come within the meaning of espionage.

ATTACK ON CONSUL.
The Japanese newspapers in Harbin, in the meantime, are printing violent articles attacking the American Consul-General, Mr. Hanson, accusing him of conniving with Mr. Archibald Steele, the New York Times correspondent, and Dr. Lindt, in political activities prejudicial to the Manchukuo Government.

The Japanese newspapers declare that both Dr. Lindt and Mr. Steele will shortly be deported.

Mr. Steele has not been subjected to the same treatment as Dr. Lindt for the simple reason that instead of going to hotel to stay, he has been the guest of Mr. Hanson, the American Consul-General.

BANDIT OUTRAGE.
Attention of Japan was attracted to the correspondents when they were victims of a bandit outrage to the east of Harbin.

It was then stated that they had been to Hallun to see General Ma Chan-shan on behalf of the Lytton Commission, the Japanese having put every obstacle in the way of a personal interview between the members of the League Commission and the Hellungkian "rebel" leader.

Dr. Lindt and Mr. Steele both deny this story, declaring that an interview with General Ma Chan-shan was obviously good copy. They were solely engaged in seeking news for their respective journals.

How the affair will wind up it is difficult to say. It is suggested that the Consular representatives of the two journalists will not take the seizure of their papers lying down.—Reuter.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney.

Watch your re-entries. Don't be too anxious to ruff a suit if there is a possibility of establishing good cards of which to discard this suit. Bold bidding gets the declarer into a small slam declaration, but careful playing of the hand gives him his contract.

 ♠ A-K-8-4 ♥ A-Q-5 ♦ K-B-7-5-2 ♣ 10 	 NORTH 15-14 EAST 9-5-3-2 DEALER SOUTH 271 	 ♠ J-10-9 ♥ 10-8-6 ♦ J-10-9 ♣ Q-8-6-5

The Bidding.

South, the dealer, opened the contracting with one club, West

passed and North overcalled with a spade. This is a one bid over a one bid and is known as the one over one. It requires partner to keep the bidding open at least once. East passed and South bid two clubs. North then bid three diamonds and South three hearts which North boldly took to six hearts.

The Play

West's opening lead was the jack of diamonds which South, the declarer, won with the ace. Most players would now make the mistake of attempting to ruff a club. The proper play is to lead the deuce of hearts and finesse the queen. East will win with the king and return the three of hearts, hoping to stop the declarer from getting a valuable ruff. The declarer wins the trick with the jack of hearts and leads the three of diamonds, winning in the dummy with the king. The ace of spades is then led from dummy and the six of diamonds discarded.

The five of diamonds is played from dummy, East discarding the three of spades and the declarer trumping. The seven of hearts is led to dummy's ace which picks up the only outstanding trump in the opponents' hands. The declarer then leads the king of spades from dummy and discards a small club. Two good diamonds are led from dummy, declarer discarding the three and nine of clubs. Then the 10 of clubs is led, declarer winning with the ace. His

Behind these rolling clouds of smoke, raging flames were sweeping a $32,500,000 pier of the Cunard Line in New York when this picture was taken. More than 700 firemen, fifty pieces of land fire apparatus and a half-dozen fireboats fought to prevent the blaze from spreading to adjoining piers, and surgeons treated scores of persons affected by the smoke.

For 48 hours a blaze had raged under a Cunard Steamship Company pier in the Hudson River. The huge structure finally collapsed, as you see in this picture. Damage amounted to at least $2,000,000. Scores of firemen were overcome by smoke. The only fatality was that of an architect, Ralph A. Kluge, who had designed the pier. He was killed by a swinging hose nozzle while watching the blaze.

MAN HUNTERS

BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY.

Susan Carey, 19, pretty and an orphan, lives with her Aunt Jessie on the West Side of Chicago. On finishing a business course she is employed by Ernest Heath, architect. She meets Jack Waring, man about town, and Ray, a young stenographer in the office across the way. Waring seems dissatisfied but Susan discourages him. Mrs. Heath openly scolds Susan. Bob Dunbar, young millionaire who attended business school with her, invites Susan to lunch, starts to say something important and is interrupted by Denise Ackroyd, a society girl. Dunbar sails for Europe and Susan realizes she cares deeply for him. Ben Lamman, another admirer, takes her to a studio party but she dislikes his friends. Aunt Jessie departs to visit her sister and Rose Milton, slightly older than Susan, comes to stay with her. Susan, lonely, accepts Waring's invitation for an evening's fun.

The "place out on the Milwaukee Road" proved to be a big old house, set back from the highway and flanked by rows of ancient maples. It was such a house as one of Chicago's meat-barons might have built in the nineties—all curlicues and hybrid ornamentation. Outside it had a sort of remote, Victorian dignity, but inside it was hung with the cheap colours of a temple of jazz.

The coloured girl in the coat room accepted Susan's wrap with superb disdain. Susan was terribly nervous. There was something about the atmosphere of the place that disturbed her. Ray, however, seemed perfectly at ease. She demanded hairpins, spilled powder about, and bullied the cheek girl unmercifully. Delighted with the effect she had produced, Ray ordered Susan to follow her and the two—tall brunette and, petite blonde—joined their escorts.

At the end of the long room an orchestra thumped out a monotonous jungle dirge. It was strange, sullen music. After a brief consultation of menus Waring asked Susan to dance. The tempo of the music had quickened. There was more life in it now. The saxophone had ceased complaining and seemed to be beating us merrily as a saxophone can. Susan gave herself up to the moment. It was months since she had danced and then with some awkward boy. Waring's performance had an ease and smoothness of which she had never dreamed. It was like poetry. It was like flying. His arm tightened around her, imperceptibly.

"Good girl," he said in her ear. "I know you'd dance like this." Susan leaned back a little to read the expression in his eyes.

"You know?" she questioned. "How?"

"Something about the way you walk." She was pleased, though she could not have said why. When the music ended Susan was sorry to return to the table. It was rather like coming back to earth after a trip to Mars. For the first time she had a really good look at Ray's escort. He had been introduced as Mr. Webb. After a moment or two Susan realized who he was, the junior member of the real estate firm in whose office Ray worked. He seemed a rapid, amiable young man. He had red hair and, she discovered, had been recently graduated from Harvard. Susan was not very favourably impressed. Indeed, Mr. Webb (known to his intimates as "Sky") did not seem to have much to offer beyond a ready laugh and a trick of twirling his moustache. The moustache, small as it was, revolted Susan. She found Jack Waring's clean shaven face a likable contrast.

Waring was at his best in the role of host. Considerate, agreeable and amusing. If the flash he carried in his pocket was emptied with alarming alacrity as the evening wore on Susan was too inexperienced to notice it. As a matter of course she refused to have her ginger ale "spiked." Waring's urbanity seemed to increase and if Schuyler Webb laughed noisily now and then she put it down to collegiate high spirits and gave it no further thought.

They ate and danced and danced again. Susan had no idea of the time. But as group after group drifted in and the smoke began to hang in clouds over the big room she was conscious of a sense of uneasiness.

"Isn't it terribly late?" she murmured to Waring. They were dancing a waltz and the sensuous strains of the music made Susan's pulses throb.

"Nonsense!" he laughed at her. "The night's young. We've only started to play. I knew you'd be a wonderful playmate," he whispered. "Only you were so stand-offish I never had a chance to find out." He was holding her closely, too closely, Susan thought, her instinct sharpened and revolted for an instant by the scent of liquor on his breath.

A moment ago he had been a quiet friend—flushed and voluminous, it was true, but still a friend. Now Waring was becoming a menace, a strange man with a reddened face, a man who had been drinking. Susan could see the little lines around his eyes. All of a sudden she thought of Bob Dunbar, his firm, clean youthfulness. It was as if a clean, sweet breeze had blown across a stagnant waste. She knew with aching certainty why she had been trapped into this indiscretion. If she could not have the real thing she had been willing to take second best.

"Really, I must go," she pleaded. "Rose—my friend—will be waiting for me. She hasn't a key." Waring smiled at her a little foolishly. "Be nice!" he muttered in an unsure voice. "Don't spoil everything while the evening's still on the make."

Uncomfortable but determined, Susan persisted. At last Waring, annoyed, stopped at their table and consulted his watch. The girl gasped at what she saw.

"It's 11:30," she exclaimed. "And it will take a good hour to get home! Whatever shall I do?"

Ray reddened, her lips unconcernedly. "Don't crab the party," she said calmly. "It's going good."

Miserable, Susan stared at her. "Sky" Webb laughed foolishly. "Let's move along, anyhow," he said. "Let's riff-riff here. We can go to Tony's. Like Tony's better, anyhow."

What followed was to be a nightmare in Susan's memory forever. The rocketing ride in the car to another noisy scene of hilarity, the band whose unrelenting music seemed never to come to an end, the wild bursts of laughter from the crowd at the next table. White-faced, her eyes ringed in shadows as the night unwound itself, Susan surveyed the scene. If this were pleasure, she'd be glad to take her share of misery.

"I want to go home . . . I want to go home," she wailed in her inmost heart, although outwardly she appeared contained and calm. How blessed, from this vantage, was the thought of the white haven of her narrow room, how marvelously safe the tiny house on the shabby street!

And what would Rose think? She would be frantic! Susan's head began to ache. A steady, deep throb of pain it was. She smiled with difficulty and when she danced her feet were no longer light.

What a little fool she had been! Why had she come? It was one o'clock. It was two. Through it all Ray remained pert, fresh and composed. She drank little. Ray "didn't believe" in it. But the shifting scene did not shock or startle her. Ray was a true child of the pavements. Nothing

A number of reliability trials of Army vehicles were carried out on the northern slopes of All-y-Baby, a well-known test hill near Liangchen which is 1,800 yards in length with an average gradient of 1 in 6.75 and a maximum gradient of 1 in 3. Our picture shows a machine-gun carrier of the standard services type at the top of the hill. All vehicles in trials contained their full services loads.—(Times copyright).

CINEMA SCREENING

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES.

Greta—have you met her? Norwegian, Miss Nissen born in Oslo.
She studied music, dancing and dramatic art in the Royal Opera House,
Copenhagen, Denmark. When only
six, she played a tiny angel in a big lullaby, but what an angel. Following the road of fame with dancing feet,
she went on the stage—first in the National Theatre, Oslo, then in other European capitals. In those days,
she appeared by royal command.
Broadway first fell for her as the pantomime sensation of "Beggar On Horseback" which brought picture
contracts. She played in "The Wanderer" and "Love Thief." In the Fox picture, "Fazio," she was featured with Charles Farrell. She tried several stage ventures, losing money, accident but not her figure. She signed
a new feature in "Women of All Nations" and "Transatlantic."

Her latest role is that of an intriguing siren in "Ambassador Bill."
Will Rogers' starring picture showing
to-day at the King's Theatre, in which
the famed comedian portrays a home-
sick U. S. diplomat who hilariously lives up to his name. Miss Nissen is mistress of the dancing art from tap
to toe, including the Scandinavian.
She insists she doesn't care for
clothes which is somewhat ambiguous,
growing in favour every day. Her art
as an actress matches her skill as a dancer. She is nimble at both ends,
a shiver, a quiver. In kissin, Nissen
isn't missin'!

"The Perfect Alibi."
A. A. Milne, author of the play,
"The Fourth Wall," from which the
coming attraction at the Queen's Theatre, "The Perfect Alibi," is taken, is one of England's foremost
writers, credited with several successfully-produced plays, and a number
of novels which have enjoyed tremendous circulations everywhere. As a stage play, "The Perfect Alibi" enjoyed a highly-successful run for two years. Some of Milne's other better-known plays are "The Dover Road,"
"Mr. Pin Passes By," and "The Ivory Door," the last of which ran for ten
months in New York.

Milne is world-famous for his series
of books for children. The Christopher Robin series, the main character
of which is his seven-year-old son, is
still widely-read, one of the books,
"Winnie the Pooh," was one of the outstanding best-sellers in the United States alone. "Now We are Six" and
"When We Were Young," two other books in the series, were likewise best-sellers.

"The Perfect Alibi," which will be shown at the Queen's Theatre, this week after "The Bigger Picture," is a Basil Dean production released by Radio Pictures. Cast in the film are Robert Loraine, Frank Lawton,
Dorothy Boyd, C. Aubrey Smith, War-
wick Ward, Ellis Jeffreys and others.

A tribute rated by few, perhaps no
other cinema neophyte, was that according Virginia Lee Pickering, petite, blonde and blue-eyed, when she made
her initial entry on the Paramount
set for her role in "24 Hours," dialogue edition of Louis Bromfield's popular novel which the King's Theatre
will show, beginning next Wednesday.

kering. Regis Toomey instantly deserted lovely Miriam Hopkins, Director Marion Gering and other folks engaged in production, sprang from their chairs to bolster the ranks of
the self-appointed welcome committee. Virginia Lee was only six months, two weeks and one day old
on this occasion, and looked decidedly fetching in her fluffy ensemble and pillowing of pink and white. However, she proved herself a real trouper,
doing her part to the complete satisfaction of the director. She cried once, and that fortunately,
was part of her role. The young actress was accompanied on the set
by her mother, Mrs. George Pickering, a nurse, and Rachel Smith head
Paramount's Hollywood studio. At
the conclusion of her scene in the picturization of Louis Bromfield's best-selling novel, Virginia Lee was awarded a privilege which never has been granted any other person: A limousine was driven up a ramp and through seldom-opened special doors directly onto the sound stage, to take her home in the style befitting the furore she created at the studio.

"Arrowsmith" at the Central
"Arrowsmith," Samuel Goldwyn's
picture starring Ronald Colman as the
Central Theatre to be shown at 5.15
and 9.30 p.m. only for the next two days, is acknowledged to be the masterpiece of Sinclair Lewis who is the first American novelist ever to be awarded a Noble Prize. Even before
he received that world-wide honour
last year, he had been known for ten years as a leader of American literature.

The notion of writing a novel about
a plague-fighting hero came to him
from Dr. Paul de Kruif, the famous bacteriologist and eminent writer on medical subjects. All of the authentic material contained in the book
and the picture was supplied by Dr.
Hunters" and "Hunger Fighters"
have been best sellers almost as popular as Lewis' own.

"Arrowsmith" was one of the issues
which led to the famous quarrel last
Theodore Dreiser at the Metropolitan
Club, Dreiser claiming that the project had been offered to him before it was to Lewis and that he had refused
it.

Sidney Howard, the Pulitzer Prize
playwright who has done the adapting
to the screen of all Ronald Colman's
talking pictures, asserted, after finishing the adaptation of "Arrowsmith,"
that Sinclair Lewis' method of writing
makes his books ideal from the
technical point of view for the screen.
Their vivid characterization, episodic
treatment and rapid action, he said,
left the adapter little to do but concentrate the action and cut out minor
details.

John Ford, director of the famous
"The Iron Horse," had charge of the
Artists picture, for Samuel Goldwyn.
Besides Ronald Colman in the leading role, the cast contains Helen Hayes, Richard Bennett, A. E. Anson, Beulah
Bondi and Myrna Loy.

WOMEN'S WORLD

FOR OUR LADY READERS.

Here's a bathing costume of a "different" stripe. There's a Parisian inspiration in this "costume de bain" with its diagonal-cut weave and form-molding cut. Its feature is an inner brassiere of silk which crosses its low shoulder straps in back and emerges as a belt in front. Of white and yellow, it is especially effective in contrast with sun-bronzed skins.

YOUR HEALTH.

Food and the Mind.

Few people realize what a large part is played by the mind in the proper digestion and assimilation of food. The whole of the alimentary process is under the control of the nervous system, which has its seat in the brain; consequently a cheerful mental attitude favours digestion, and it is a well-known fact that a fit of temper or a sudden fright will completely interfere with the digestive process. For this reason, companionship at meals is a most desirable thing, especially if it is congenial, and light, cheerful conversation is an excellent aid to digestion.

Worry, anxiety, anger, hatred, and other similar emotions tend to contract the blood vessels, inhibit the flow of the digestive fluids, and benumb nerve action. These destructive emotional states actually sour the vital fluids as well as the mental disposition.

Excessive Anxiety Spoils a Meal.
Many people entirely spoil the beneficial effects of a nourishing and well-balanced meal by excessive anxiety. They are always in fear of making mistakes about this food or that of eating too much or eating too little. They ponder and worry over every morsel; then for a day or two they analyse their symptoms, and try to determine how this plate of soup or that piece of cheese affected them.

Such a mental attitude is destructive and weakening, and will poison the most wholesome food and drink. Mental dyspepsia will inevitably express itself in physical indigestion and malnutrition.

The great thing to do is to make your food selections to the best of your ability; so much protein, so much fat, and so much mineral matter. Then, when the food is on the table, forget entirely the problems of diet, put all thought of business, work, or study from you, and settle down to the absolute enjoyment of what you are eating.

True Appetite
Of course, everyone will not be able to enjoy his food by merely being told to do so. Enjoyment of food is a problem each must work out for himself as far as the state of mind is concerned. The more strictly dietetic factors in this matter of food enjoyment are: first, true appetite or hunger; second, the food must be so prepared and served that it will be attractive.

The mind exerts such a vast influence over every function of the body that it is impossible to set bounds to it. We are the creatures of habit, and eat so many times a day largely from sheer force of custom. A man can exercise his FASHION NOTES.

Overhauling Your Wardrobe.

I think one should be really ruthless with a last season's wardrobe, keeping only the things that won't deteriorate or soon look hopelessly out of fashion.

How nice to begin a new season with everything new! No memento of good times that are past. We must look forward to trends to come, not be constantly remembering those that are gone. It is fatal to be always remembering. And get rid of the mistakes too.

If you have a dress you hate, you are not going to love it any more this year, nor is an unbecoming or ill-fitting garment suddenly going to change its ways. Cut your losses and begin again. There will be a much happier atmosphere in your wardrobe, even though it is greatly depleted.

Much better the small, well-chosen and well-beloved collection than a cupboard full of clothes that have to be looked after and worn out.

The next thing is to sort what is left. Winter things must be brushed and put away. Lingerie and silk stockings should be overhauled and put on one side for repair. The things left over from last season that you really feel have lots of wear in them yet should be sent to be cleaned and hand-dressed, and if you are lucky enough to have the time and a clever dressmaker, or you are clever enough to overhaul them yourself, you can bring them up-to-date easily and inexpensively.

FOR BABY'S BASKET.

Hand-painted sprays of roses and rose-buds provide a novel and attractive decoration on a toilet set for a tiny baby's basket. The set consists of brush, comb, soap-box, and the tiny powder box, in a cream colour, and the tiny paintings appear on the top of each article, where they stand out realistically.

will power to partake of a diet which his sense of taste had not previously been able to appreciate; but no amount of will power can ever provide good nourishment out of a diet against which taste continually rebels.

Our sense of taste is given us to protect our stomach from anything that might prove harmful. We must therefore regain the natural use of our tongues, and allow them to be the guardians of our health and life.

MEDICO.

SHACKLE BANGLES.

A Clanking Mannequin.

At Molyneux's mid-season showing in London recently, the entrance of each mannequin was heralded by the ominous clanking of metal.

When one of them appeared, she was seen to be shackled by two bands of shining chromium plating, built on the lines of handcuffs.

Others had on one arm sets of six to 12 narrow metal bangles with a silver or copper finish.

In contrast with these gleaming manacles, most of the models shown wore of matt-surfaced materials.

Cotton and silk mixture crepe and pique appeared in evening fabrics.

A spectacular evening gown was made of what looked at first sight like the homely zenana-cloth used for dressing-gowns.

Actually it was a lovely silk material of a soft shade of lime green, with a two-inch edging of orange net at the hem.

Rich Simplicity.

Evening gowns were high in front and backless except for criss-cross strappings.

An Arctic ensemble comprising a three-quarter length coat and calf-length dress of green printed chiffon suggested a becoming alternative to the trailing hems usually seen in the enclosure there.

Rich simplicity was the rule for the Court gowns, which had slightly bloused corsages and skirts continuously cut to mould the limbs gracefully.

Two of these gowns were almost completely covered with embroidery, a third relying for its beauty on the richness of the gold lame material.

USES OF SOUR MILK.

Not only is sour milk excellent for mixing scones, pancakes, and small cakes, it is also excellent for cleaning tarnished silver.

Put the milk in a bowl. Set the discoloured forks and spoons in this, leave for half an hour, then wash in hot water, using a soft brush. Dry with a clean towel and polish with a cloth or soft duster.

Sour milk is also an excellent cosmetic. Add a little perfume to the milk, beat up and apply to the face at night. It can be used for roughness, freckles, or sunburn.

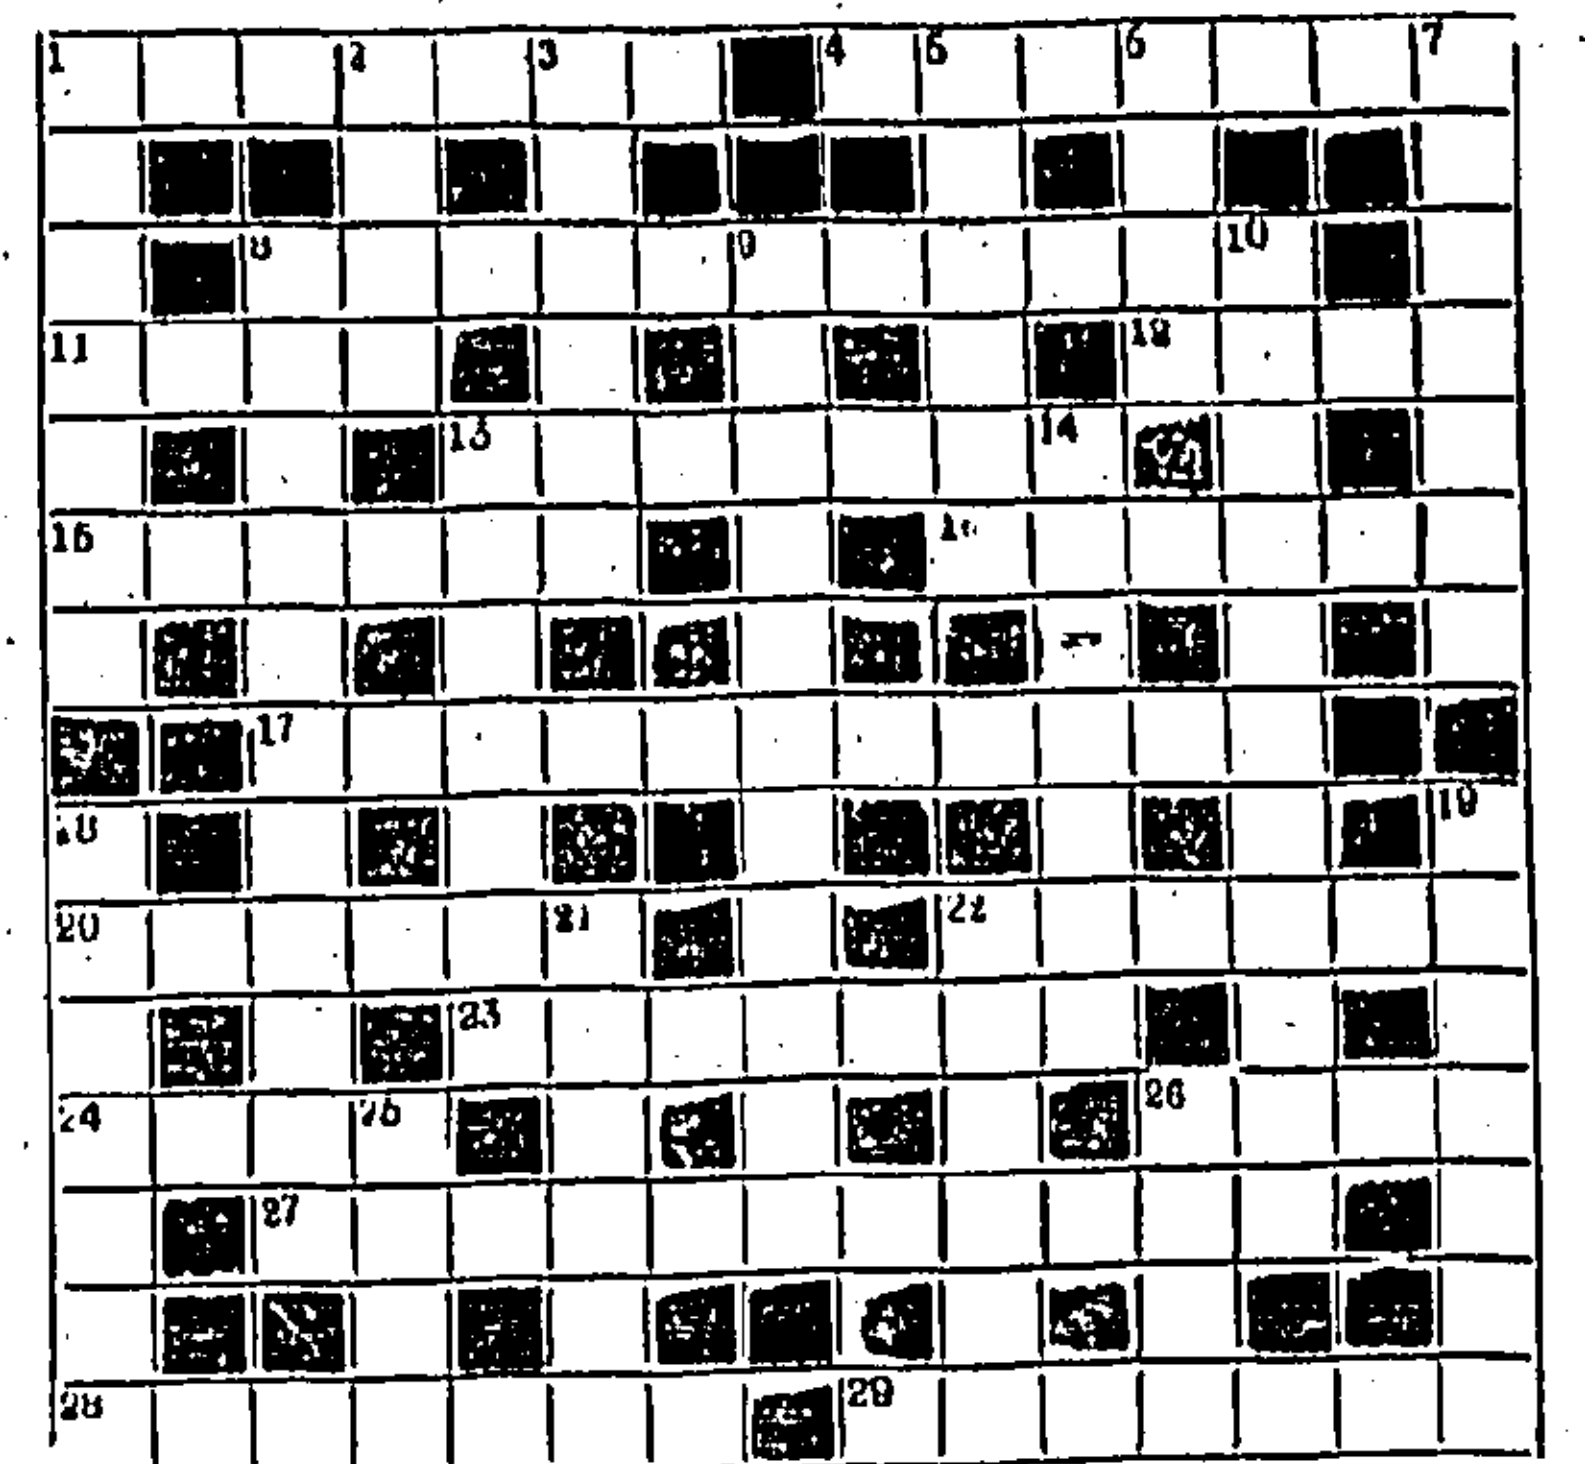

LIZARD AND SUEDE

Suede and lizard skin are combined in some of the newest and most attractive shoes for wear this season. The shoes are made in court shape, with heels and backs of suede, the pointed toes being of lizard skin and decorated in the front with tiny skin bows. Brown suede and fawn lizard skin are used for one smart pair, but other colours are also attractive.

This beach dress worn by Miss Nancy Glave at a charity fashion show is of green and white striped jersey, lined with white pique. She wears it over one of the new novelty weave San Tropez bathing suits.

THE ECONOMY BOGEY

There are, we fear, still very many people who are dissatisfied with the League of Nations and with the World Disarmament Conference. It is, however, noteworthy that the critics are generally those who have never shown any real anxiety to assist in making the League an effective and powerful international instrument or in encouraging the idea that the Geneva Conference shall achieve positive results for a reduction in national armaments. Strangely enough, the suggestion that the Powers in general, and Britain in particular, should turn their backs upon both the League and the Conference, is usually put forward in the name of "economy." Objection is taken to what is called "the growing expenditure of the League of Nations and the heavy outlay connected with international conferences." In this connexion, it has been pointed out that the cost of the Disarmament Conference is some £175,000 to the League, while the cost of the British delegation is estimated at some £40,000 in addition.

The favourite argument put forward by these critics is that there is really nothing to show for these Conferences, and that the old plan of negotiating by diplomacy was certainly enormously cheaper. It seems to be forgotten, however, that in the days of "the old diplomacy" the Great War cost Britain about £9,000,000,000; that it left her with a National Debt in the region of £8,000,000,000; that she had nearly a million dead and over two million wounded; that the damage to property in the British Empire was estimated to be something approaching £400,000,000; and that Britain lost mercantile shipping of over 9,000,000 gross tonnage. These items do not exhaust the full list of costs—direct and indirect—but they are sufficient to remind us how terrible is the toll that war exacts. It is strange that the word "economy" is seldom used in relation to the expenditure on war. The critics do not raise any protest against the expenditure of millions of pounds a day for war purposes. But they begrudge the comparatively infinitesimal amount that is being spent by Britain on the collective efforts to secure a real measure of disarmament which will strengthen world peace and security—which means also Britain's security—and help to save the peoples from another costly conflict. Moreover it is not true to say that the Disarmament Conference has nothing to show for its labours. What has definitely emerged is that substantial results can be secured if the Governments represented—including our own—are really determined to succeed. Furthermore, the prospects have improved as a result of the "Left" victory in the French elections.

If by an expenditure of £40,000 Britain can assist in the formulation of an agreed plan for international reduction of armaments, the expenditure will be in the nature of a profitable investment. For the Prime Minister has already declared that the alternative to an effective disarmament agreement may be increased building by Great Britain under the escalator clause of the London Agreement. If that should eventuate, the additional cost to taxpayers will not be a few thousands of pounds, but several millions of pounds. And Britain is already spending over £100,000,000 a year on armaments. Real economy means wise expenditure, and there is surely no wiser expenditure than that incurred on efforts to lighten the burden of armaments, increase international security and make the resort to war unnecessary.

Sir Denison Ross has implied that too many young men and women in England go to the universities. This is an opinion so frequently voiced that some examination of it may be profitable. At the outset it may be remarked that if England errs at all in this respect, it does not err so grievously as some other countries. One in every 1150 English persons has had a university education, compared with one in every 690 in Germany. From the point of view of those who regard a university training as a dangerous possession, the English record compares even more favourably with that of Scotland, where one in every 455 has a degree. In the United States the proportion is still more startling, being one in 125. The argument usually advanced against opening the doors of the universities too widely is the desirability of keeping up the standard of work done in them. Even to-day some things are done in universities which really have no place there. These are not confined to any one country. If a United States college has awarded a Ph. D. degree for a treatise on a high school cafeteria, an English university considers that it furthers the cause of learning by giving a course in brewing. If the tendency to teach this sort of thing were encouraged by admitting more people to the universities, or if enlarging the universities' area of recruitment meant filling them with students incapable of deriving benefit from the genuinely cultural studies pursued in them, an irresistible case for keeping down their numbers would have been made out. But would this be the natural effect? There are two ways of getting more students into English universities. One is to lower the standard of the entrance examination, thus opening them up to those who can afford to pay their fees but cannot pass the intellectual tests they set for admission. The other is to give more and more public assistance to those who can pass the intellectual tests but cannot afford the fees. The first method undoubtedly would lower speedily the standard of scholarship maintained in Britain's centre of higher learning. But fortunately there is not the smallest prospect of its being adopted. It is a partial putting into practice of the second method that has brought about the density of population in the universities which some authorities view with alarm. Obviously, their alarm is without foundation. In the last few years numbers of young men and women who would not otherwise have done so have been enabled by public assistance to get a university education in Britain. The standard of learning of no university has been adversely

THE ARTISTS OF THE COUNTRY ARE THE PEOPLE WHO HAVE THE RIGHT TO SAY HOW THE PEOPLE SHOULD BE CLOTHED, FOR THEY HAVE THE KNOWLEDGE OF WHAT WILL BEST SUIT THE HUMAN FORM.—Oscar Wilde.

Mrs. Knight of the Peninsula Hotel has notified the Police that she lost her hand-bag in Des Voeux Road one afternoon. The bag contained a small sum of money and personal articles.

A new weekly journal made its appearance in Hongkong on Saturday. Named The Critic, it follows, in format, Truth, the well-known London periodical. It sells at fifty cents per copy.

A watch and fob to the value of $20 was stolen from the bed room of Mr. Mitara, who occupies room No. 31 at the Trocadero Hotel, Peking Road. The watch was taken some time during Friday afternoon.

Lo Shu, the fob of a passenger boat, was fined $20 or two weeks' imprisonment by the Hon. Comdr. Hale at the Marine Court this morning, for having made his craft to the President Coolidge while she was under way in the harbour this morning.

Mr. A. E. Bates has arrived from New Zealand for the purpose of taking over the activities of the New Zealand Forestry Ltd. in Hongkong. He is accompanied by Mr. L. A. Falkner, who is the Far East Business Manager, and is resident at Repulse Bay Hotel.

The British film version of the Viennese operetta, "The Beggar Student," now showing at the Queen's, is an extremely creditable production. Shirley Dale and Lance Fairfax, who share the musical honours, Mr. Fairfax having a particularly fine voice, play their parts with restraint, while the humorous interludes are provided by Jerry Verno (Jan Janik) and Mark Daly (The Sergeant).

Eight Chinese were brought before Mr. Fraser, at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning, charged with stealing away from Macassar, to Hongkong on the Dutch steamer Tjiliboet. It was stated that after the steamer had left Macassar, the defendants were found in the steerage quarters without any money to pay their passage. His Worship imposed a fine of $75, or six weeks, the fine being equivalent to the cost of the passage.

Banished for life seven years ago, an elderly Chinese was charged before Mr. Fraser, at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning, and was sentenced to nine months' hard labour. His record showed that he was convicted some time ago of armed robbery and kidnapping and was sentenced to 11 years' hard labour. When he had served his sentence, he was banished. His Worship said he had intended to impose a sentence of 12 months, but in consideration for his age, he would take three months off.

ly affected by this, because in every single case the requirements of the university's entrance examination have been fully satisfied before the question of public assistance has arisen. On the contrary, this development has raised the standard of university work in England by considerably widening the field from which the universities may pick their students.

OUR MUDDLED ELDERS

Why Youth Awaits the Coming Crash
By "THIRTY"

"Civilisation, of course, is cracking up; but otherwise things aren't so bad!"

THE SPEAKER was a clever young business man and the remark was made as casually as a reference to the weather, for it represents the point of view of many men and women of the younger generation. The coming collapse of "civilisation," as we know it, is regarded as something too obvious for discussion, like the incompetence of politicians, or the burden of taxation. The only point in discussion is when the collapse will come, and how. What older people are just beginning timidly to hint to their incredulous contemporaries, younger people have long regarded as self-evident. And the reason for this is that the younger generation has a more realistic outlook.

To older people this may seem both sweeping and startling, so perhaps I ought first to explain the reasons for the different outlook of those of us who have been born since the beginning of the century. One reason is that we have been born into a more difficult world than our parents. In order to exist we have to examine problems that never troubled them. They were born in the piping times of prosperity, and when they were young the world was a comparatively comfortable and stable place. Despite the convulsions of latter years, they cannot visualise a permanently different order of things. They do not grasp the significance of the changes that are taking place under their eyes.

We, on the other hand, can barely remember a stable world. We have never known the comfortable assurance that prosperity breeds, and our view of the future is not clouded by any set notions as to what life should be like. We have open minds to expect anything, or nothing, from the future.

Another reason is that our upbringing and environment have been different from that of previous generations because of the advent of the machine. Almost from the nursery we have been interested in scientific or mechanical things. Subconsciously, perhaps, but inevitably, this has given us a different mental approach to life because association with anything mechanical or scientific induces exact thinking, which is sometimes mistaken for irreverence or a sense of superiority.

If our cars, or our wireless sets, or even our homely electric lights go wrong, we know that there is an exact reason for the trouble and that, till we find it, they cannot go right again. Therefore we are moulded in a frame of mind which demands—and gets—an exact answer to curiosity in so many of the things in which we are interested. When our curiosity in the wider problems of life is not gratified by an exact answer, because age cannot supply it, we lose confidence in age. Age fails to impress us, because age's mental approach to a problem is so different and—to us—so unsatisfying.

If my car breaks down on the road it is no use adopting the technique which age employs to solve its problems. It is idle to form a committee of investigation and to be content with a compromise decision, a majority verdict, or with mere unreasoning and optimistic deductions from history about "muddling through." Till the exact reason for the trouble is found the car will not go.

Such instances face my generation every day, and naturally induce an uncompromising attitude of mind. When we apply this outlook to the present state of the world we find that the world has gone hopelessly wrong, and that those in charge of it, who are largely responsible for its present condition, can advance no coherent explanations and merely hurry from one nonplussed conference to another.

Meanwhile, the great machine of civilisation is obviously plunging headlong to disaster. It is not surprising, therefore, that we should have no confidence in the ability of the drivers to apply the brakes, however many beautiful phrases they invent. If they know how to apply the brakes they would have applied them long since. It is obvious, from the existence of so many divergent political and economic theories, that they do not know. For clearly all those theories cannot be right. And no amount of optimism or reference to history books can convince us that disaster will be avoided. History, in any case, is far too young to show any close parallel to the present situation, even if history were ever an infallible argument.

If one sees a car plunging over a cliff, it is not convincing or encouraging to the onlookers to assure them that in a previous case of the same sort the occupants emerged unscathed. All the indications are against it happening again.

Let us look at the present indications. The world is completely out of control, economically and politically. Conditions are getting worse and politicians, financiers and business men are powerless to do anything. All the indications, therefore, point to a complete collapse.

Several older men to whom I have suggested this have replied, in almost identical words: "I admit that it looks as if things are going to collapse, but, of course, it will never be allowed. They cannot afford to let civilisation go."

Who "they" are is never clearly explained, but it is hinted that "they" are the master-minds of politics and finance. If this is so—and this is the only argument against collapse I have heard—my generation may be forgiven for having no confidence in "them" for letting things get so far. It is high time "they" stopped playing and put an end to the joke.

It is clear that the country in which things are most hopeful is England, and that if any country can reintroduce stability to the world it will be our own. Let us, therefore, examine the mysterious and omnipotent "they" of England to see what we can hope for from them.

Turning to the politicians, we find that the present National Government is composed of the very men, of all parties, who by their action—or inaction—in the past are responsible for the state of affairs to-day. Such remedial measures as the Government has so far taken have been the result, not of vision or leadership, but of fear and necessity. An emergency has compelled them to do, too late, what foresight and courage should have accomplished voluntarily years ago. The fact that some of them foresaw disaster makes their responsibility heavier. But responsibility plays no part in modern politics. In fact, plain defection from duty is usually rewarded by a peerage. Meanwhile, it is idle to expect salvation from a Government which cannot achieve the temperance of a village cricket club, is afraid to institute the drastic measures of economy which are essential, can be scared by a few hundred post-cards, and dare not even take a strong line in such a trivial matter as Sunday cinemas.

Apart from the politicians, to whom we will return later, we have to consider the financiers and the business men. Discarding the jargon with which it is the fashion to cloak financial incompetence, we are confronted with the plain fact that our intelligent financiers have lent the resources of this country to bankrupt foreign States to assist them in competing with our war-shattered industries. They have just realised that they will never see their money back, and now spend their time discussing how much good money to throw after bad.

In this money-worshipping age, it is perhaps the crowning blasphemy for a young man to suggest that the "big business man" must take his share of the blame for the present state of affairs, even if it is not the largest share. But (Continued on Page 9.)

"If I don't get home by 12, I'll be drunk—so don't worry."

THE BOOKSHELF

THE SINO-JAPANESE PUZZLE

"The Sino-Japanese Puzzle," by Dr. Neville Whymant (Messrs. Victor Gollancz, Ltd., London, 2s. 6d. net.), is a little book which is likely to meet with a mixed reception. The author, formerly Professor of Oriental Classics and Mythology in Tokyo Universities, Assistant in Chinese and Japanese at Oxford, and Lecturer in Chinese and Japanese in the University of London, has essayed a big task in presenting, within the limits of 150 pages, a study of the origins, causes and effects of the recent conflict between China and Japan. He is, however, well equipped for the undertaking and he gives us a book which is well worth pondering over.

Analysing the history of the Chinese and Japanese peoples, the author is at pains to point out the error of considering present troubles as arising from present causes. He dives into the historical background, emphasises the different traits of the two peoples and presents to the reader a fascinating comparative study in national psychology. It is not possible within the space at our disposal to follow the author through his reasoning of history, or to give anything like a comprehensive summary of his conclusions. Suffice it to say that Dr. Whymant, though critical of both countries, particularly so of Japan and her policies, is constructive in his criticism. Of China, he says that she lacks at the moment the man who will be strong enough to pull together all the best qualities she has, and hold them aloft for the nation to see. "But that she has failed in this great emergency is no guarantee that she will fail again, or that she has lost those very qualities which have brought her out of similar situations before. She now needs help; she will either go forward to greater glory than she has yet achieved, or she will remain submerged for some time longer, continue to be a prey to all kinds of random political theories which are but half digested, and constitute a growing menace to the peace and ease of the whole world."

The author is, not without reason, up in arms against the "pretty-pretty" writers on Japan who have made a business of fooling their readers ever since the country has been accessible to the dilettante scribbler. He goes beneath the surface, gets down to essentials and is unapprising in his criticism. Japan, he says, has shown indecision and a tendency to adopt changes without a preliminary trial of their fitness for her people. "She is predisposed to the spectacular, the aggressive, and too ready to be deceived by anything showing a critical faculty, and the growth of an international spirit to take the place of an exaggerated nationalism. Japan will become one of the most important factors in world relationships."

On the whole, a book which is most thought-provoking, but one which will assuredly find no favour amongst the Japanese.

LIGHT FICTION.

In "Lone Isle," by E. Charles Vivian (Ward, Lock and Co., London, 3s. 6d. net.) we have a strong array of type which has made the author so deservedly popular. It is a pearl fishery story, with mystery encountered at almost every turn, and there is a most surprising denouement. A little drawn-out in parts, the tale is, none the less, one which will hold the reader's interest to the end.

Miss L.G. Moberly continues to give us vivid novels, written with charm and ability. In "A Mystery Chain" (Ward, Lock and Co.) she has as main character a foreign woman who poses as a great philanthropist but who, under cover of her social activities, is involved in many shady matters. How she gains power and influence over others is told in a most interesting story, which is relieved by a double romance.

Another of Miss Moberly's novels, by the same publisher, is "Rosemary's Ordeal." This is the story of a girl who, on the death of her benefactor, learns that she was not, as she supposed, his daughter, but an adopted child. But she had culture none the less, and the story tells how she graced the new social position into which she entered, rising above the difficulties and finding eventual happiness. There is plenty of excitement, livened with clean, wholesome sentiment.

"THE COUNTRYMAN"

"The Countryman," that unique little quarterly non-party review and miscellany of rural life and industry, goes on from strength to strength. The April number, much enlarged, marks the start of its sixtieth year of publication. Here we have a publication with a charm all its own. As Thomas Hardy has said of it, "The Countryman" makes one feel in the country—and the English countryside at that. The latest tribute to its excellence comes from the

China, and, upon his return to Australia, will make important representations to the Federal authorities regarding the matter. He is convinced that the appointment of a trade representative in Hongkong is a vital necessity.

TRADE WITH EAST.

The Hon. Mr. McPhee is accompanied on his present trip by two prominent Melbourne business men, Messrs. T. S. Nettieford and C. Le. Flastrier. Mr. Le. Flastrier is a prominent Victorian patents attorney, whose firm has for years been represented in Hongkong by Messrs. Johnson, Stokes and Master. Mr. Nettieford is a member of the executive of the Australian Chamber of Manufacturers and is also a member of the Melbourne City Council.

Upon his return to Australia, Mr. Nettieford will submit a comprehensive report to the Chamber of Manufacturers on the possibilities of an enlarged Australian trade with the East.

INTERNAL PROBLEMS.

"Trading conditions in Australia today," said Mr. Nettieford, "are suffering from the same depression that is influencing the whole world. Although the political situation has improved considerably with the dismissal of the Lang administration in N.S.W., political devices will not help us much until the price of Australia's primary products, such as wool and wheat, return to normal. We can, and will, control our internal difficulties, but until the economic position of the world returns to normal, our attempts at stabilisation must, to a certain extent, be influenced largely by external instability, over which we have no control."

TURNED CORNER.

"Victoria is fortunate, inasmuch as she has not been hit as severely as the other States of the Commonwealth. Since the return of the Lyons Nationalist Government last September, the trade figures for Victoria show an increase of over thirty per cent. While the Lang administration was in power in N.S.W., an unending stream of capital flowed from that State into Victoria, and eventually investors had the greatest difficulty in finding an outlet for their money."

"Australia has quite definitely turned the corner, but whether she progresses beyond that is entirely dependant on world conditions and the rise in the price of her primary products."

BROTHERS FINED FOR ASSAULT

An altercation outside the Star Ferry Wharf yesterday had a sequel at the Kowloon Magistracy, before Mr. Fraser this morning, when two brothers, Chan Man-foo and Chan Man-fook, were charged with assaulting a man named Chan Wing-tai.

Inspector Elston, who prosecuted, said the parties were known to one another. Yesterday, the complainant met the defendants near the bus stop and he alleged that they assaulted him. Defendants stated that complainant pulled them out of a bus and assaulted them. They retaliated, but did not commence the assault.

His Worship said if that were the case, he did not think the defendants were solely to blame. If a man was pulled out of a bus when he was in a hurry, he was bound to be nasty about it. It appeared to him that the complainant got all he deserved.

Inspector Elston pointed out that the assault was more serious than the provocation warranted. The defendants did not merely assault the complainant, but continued doing so until they were stopped by the police.

Both parties were bound over, and defendants were fined $1 each.

Poet Laureate, who writes that he prefers it to any other periodical, and always reads it through with delight.

Mr. J.W. Robertson Scott, its editor, who is not unknown in the Far East, has made a tremendous success of this independent rural organ. Not only is it full of interest to the nature-lover, but it deals with the problems of the countryside on sound, practical lines, studiously ignoring the spurious and the superficial. Seeing that a sum of £1 will pay for two years' subscription, "The Countryman" is well within the means of everybody. To those in the Far East who want to keep in touch with the English countryside, we can offer no better advice than to become a regular subscriber.

STIRRING ADDRESS GIVEN TO ATHLETES

The Eastern Athletic Association "At Home" was held on Saturday night at the Chinese M.C.C. before a large gathering. This club, which was founded four years ago with a membership of 50, can now boast of four hundred members.

The prizes won in the Tennis and Ping Pong competitions were distributed during the evening, a concert being given after the presentation of awards. A skilful exhibition of Chinese boxing, a cinematograph performance and musical items were included in the programme. Master Fred Abraham, the talented young violinist, delighted the audience with some first class solos and was loudly applauded for his fine performance.

The proceedings were presided over by Mr. J. D. Bush. Mr. Ho Lu, Comptroller of the Mercantile Bank, and Mr. Chow Ngan-ting, of the National City Bank, were each of them with a special word for the deep interest which they have taken in the development of the Eastern Athletic Association. A special cup was presented to Mr. Lam Wing-yun by the committee for his financial support during the past three years.

Value Of Sport.

Before calling on Mr. Chow Ping-ung, Chairman of the E.A.A., to distribute the prizes for the Ping-pong and Tennis tournaments, Mr. Bush spoke as follows:

As chairman of this very pleasant gathering, it affords me much pleasure to say a few words on Youth and Sport. For one thing, it is pleasing to note that sports have taken such good hold of the imagination of Young China today. This keenness in sports is especially noticeable in recent years and what a good sign of the age in which old and young realize what it is to seek the outdoor life in motoring, tennis, swimming, and even cycling.

My purpose within the few moments at my disposal is to dwell on the three-fold object in sports: the playing fields can teach us many useful things that cannot be got anywhere else.

First, sports obviously help to keep us physically fit; without the playing fields no nation can expect to improve the physical development and health of its boys and girls. Games constitute one of the effective means of mobilizing and directing the youthful energy of any nation. The Chinese youth should learn to appreciate the full meaning of games, how they teach them to "keep a stiff upper lip" when they are beaten and not to become "swollen-headed" with success. Above all, keep on trying, whether at work or at play. The financial and moral depression of these difficult times is due to the undue impatience of this speed-mad age.

Do your best in the playing fields and leave the result and the verdict to the umpire or judge. No man can be strong in combat or any form of sport unless his heart is right and in the right order for work.

Sportsmanship.

This brings me to the second objective in sports. In moral as well as in physical exercises, the heart must be right. Keep before yourself always the spirit of genuine sportsmanship. Never deviate for a moment from the high standard and uphold the right principle in work or play at all costs. If this ideal can be inculcated in the youth of China, the evil of corruption in officialdom will be mitigated in time.

Then the third objective in sports is the team spirit—concentration and co-ordination of efforts of all the members within the group. Give your best for the good of the whole. Submerge the self into the many. Only through co-operation and closest understanding of all the parts, can you aim to get the team going strongly and smoothly. If you know how to co-operate, you will acquire the fine perception of how to compete, put every ounce of your energy into the game of life and take up the burden of responsibility for your country.

Out of this third objective in sports emerges the highest life-ideal, namely the pure, unselfish, efficient and concerted life, life based on Plato's conception of the tripe, the good and beautiful.

There is really a fourth objective, too; and that is to expand into the Christian philosophy of love and perfect harmony for Humanity.

COMMUNIST PLOT.

A STORY OF INTRIGUE IN KOREA RELEASED

Tokyo, June 19. The ban has been lifted from Press publication of information regarding the Communist intrigue in Korea which was unearthed on April 16 last.

The details as given out by the authorities are as follows: Six Korean Communists smuggled themselves into Seishin, Korea, from Vladivostok, but were arrested and committed for trial.

The trial opens on the 21st inst. The gang was led by a man named Yun Hak, who was acting under orders from the Vladivostok Ogpu, and planned to blow up the railway bridge over the Yalu River and the railway tracks, with a view to disturbing the Japanese occupation. They reached Seishin on April 14 in a ten-ton sailing boat, which was loaded with 880 sticks of dynamite and a large quantity of revolvers.—Reuter's Special.

Prohibited Meeting.

Tokyo, June 19. Nearly 200 people were arrested and several injured in the scuffle that occurred when police ordered the suspension of the proletarian meeting, which was being held in the Teikyo Theatre this afternoon.—Reuter.

BETH BERI

NOTED DANCER COMING TO THE KING'S

According to an announcement made by the management of the King's Theatre, Hongkong theatregoers will soon have the privilege of seeing Miss Beth Beri, well-known musical comedy artiste, in a programme of dance specialties.

Miss Beri has been featured in leading musical productions in both New York and London where her work has received the extremely laudatory comment of the critics. She is at present making a tour of the Orient, including Shanghai, Hongkong and Manila in her itinerary. According to advance information received from Shanghai her engagement there was given enthusiastic response.

Miss Beri's repertoire includes several dance numbers originated by herself and her unique beauty and grace assure her of unlimited success wherever she appears.

Her engagement at the King's Theatre, commencing Sunday, June 26th, will be in conjunction with the recent Paramount hit, "To-morrow and To-morrow," featuring Ruth Chatterton and Paul Lukas.

In a report to the Police Mr. T. H. G. Brayfield stated that he was called as a surveyor to examine a case of goods which had been taken delivery of from the s.s. Naldora and he found that one pair of pyjamas had been stolen. The goods were consigned to the Tak Cheong Tailors of Queen's Road.

ONE of her greatest attractions—her smile—has been turned to a grimace by the one manly disease of the mouth, pyorrhea. It is more than an ordinary tooth ache—it is a disease that robs the teeth of their beauty and strength. It is a disease that robs the teeth of their beauty and strength. It is a disease that robs the teeth of their beauty and strength.

She has paid a big price for her neglect! Pyorrhea, that ugly disease of the mouth, has finished its grim work. You may have it now! You may have had it for years without a warning sign. But eventually, the gums bleed, become spongy and tender. They hurt! Teeth loosen in their sockets and finally drop out or must be pulled out.

Those who think of the future safeguard their health and happiness by protecting their teeth and gums when they are healthy. They use Forhan's for the Gums, the one dentifrice made to prevent this insidious disease, pyorrhea.

Morning and night, brush your teeth with this scientific dentifrice. It is more than an ordinary tooth paste—for it not only keeps the teeth beautifully white and clean but also, forms the gums and prevents pyorrhea.

Don't lose your smile—and maybe your health too.

Forhan's for the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D.D.S., specialist in mouth diseases. It contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Astringent developed by Dr. Forhan and used by dentists throughout the world in the treatment of pyorrhea. Sole Agents: Muller, Macfarlane & Co., Inc.

Is It to be Perry's Wimbledon? HIS CHANCE TO RECOVER LOST TITLE

Great International Meeting Opens To-day

BY "VERITAS"

TWENTY THREE YEARS have passed since the late Mr. Arthur Wentworth Gore won for England the Blue Riband of the tennis world—the Men's Singles Championship at Wimbledon. He was the last Englishman to achieve the coveted distinction, but to-day, after years of disappointed hopes, Britain enters what has developed into the biggest international tennis arena in the world, with definite, and in sporting parlance, almost even chances, of regaining her lost title.

Almost everything depends on F. J. Perry. H. W. Austin as a potential world-beater is now practically legendary. That he will be among the last few is to be expected, but I do not think he is capable of winning the championship.

If the cherished ambitions of all English followers of tennis are to be realised, Perry is the only man for the job. His greatest claim to this confidence is that he has, on different occasions, already beaten the most potent challengers for the title, the only exception being Cochet.

But Perry has only met the French "wizard" once within the last 18 months, when they opposed each other in the deciding match of the Davis Cup last year. Perry was, on that occasion,

Personally I have only one fear connected with Fred Perry. He has been playing first class tennis without a break for two years. Will the incessant demand upon his stamina during that period break down under the terrific strain of Wimbledon? Only his failure in Paris last month, when he lost to Bousquet and Borotra in the England v France international match, has given any indication in this direction, though this, of course, must not be taken too seriously.

Perry is naturally endowed with splendid physique. So long as he has this advantage at his command, he must remain, with Cochet, the most serious and dangerous challenger for the Wimbledon title. That Perry will one day reach his goal, I have not the slightest doubt.

Will it be during the next fortnight?

THE WIMBLEDON CENTRE COURT IN 1891—

THIS WAS Wimbledon's Centre Court 41 years ago. The picture shows the all-comers final in the men's doubles in which Wilfred and Herbert Baddeley defeated H. S. Barlow and C. H. Martin.

beaten, but he demonstrated completely that he would be quite capable of turning the tables, and I think, after his experiences of the past winter, that should the two meet during the next fortnight, the Englishman will win.

PERRY'S NATURAL PROGRESS.

Perry is not only ambitious, but he has revealed his eager willingness to work in order to realise those ambitions. His progress, though sensational to the ordinary man in the street, has been, to the close observer, only the natural result of a severe course of training which he set himself. He thus, has at his command, all the vital qualities of a world-beater.

In stroke equipment he has nothing to learn from any of his opponents or contemporaries. It is doubtful if Lacoste can boast of a greater range of shots. Furthermore he has the ability to put them into effective operation.

Though Perry himself admits that every time he goes on the centre court at Wimbledon he feels as nervous as a kitten, yet he also admits that such sensations vanish immediately the ball is in play, and so far as nervous reaction is concerned, the Englishman is as free as anybody.

Perry is made for the "big" occasion. He has schooled himself to like and appreciate big crowds; they offer no terrors to him. It is the same with players of big reputations: he welcomes their opposition; he has thrived on the experience of it; by such opposition he has made his game what it is to-day—one of the most complete to be found in any player.

WIMBLEDON PERSONALITIES.

Wimbledon this year promises to be one of the most attractive of post-war meetings, introducing as it does, one or two outstanding personalities who, heretofore, have not been seen in England. Chief among them is Ellsworth Vines, America's leading exponent, and the only player to really subjugate Perry, though this was accomplished on American courts.

Vines does not make his appearance at Wimbledon on a reputation of being potential. He has already proved himself. No one in the history of tennis has enjoyed such a meteoric rise to fame, and no player has more completely vindicated himself. If he and Perry do meet in the competition, it is going to be one of the greatest matches in history, offering possibly more excitement and entertainment than the famous Tilden-Cochet encounter of 1929.

The re-appearance of Jack Crawford from Australia, who, with Miss Ryan, won the Mixed Doubles championship two years ago, is a subject for no little speculation. Judging from Australian critics, Crawford is playing better now than ever before, because he is taking himself more seriously. In the past the main obstacle to Crawford realising the biggest honours in tennis has been his inability to take his game with the seriousness demanded on such occasions. His cheerful and "mashed" attitude has deprived him from many a victory. He possesses all the attributes of a champion, but whether or not he comes up to expectations in his quest for the title, Wimbledon is going to be a much brighter place for his appearance.

CHAPMAN OR JARDINE?

TO BE, OR NOT TO BE?

FRED PERRY, upon whom rests Britain's chief hopes of regaining the Wimbledon title last won by A. W. Gore in 1909. Perry is among the "seeded" players of the meeting which opens to-day.

FOR ENGLAND'S CAPTAINCY NEXT WINTER

A. M. CRAWLEY PUTS FORWARD
"IDEAL SOLUTION"

WHY NOT PLAY BOTH OF THEM?

Facetious but rather ignorant people at Lord's the other day were having a lot of fun at the expense of the selectors, writes A. M. Crawley. "What happens," they asked, "if Percy Chapman makes 180 not out and Jardine makes nothing? What do the pundits do then?"

The rain effectively spoils any chance of either contingency, but by the feeling that he will take place, and the situation which prompted the gibe—Chapman's being captain with Jardine in the side—had a very simple explanation.

MEMBER'S RIGHT.

Chapman is a member of the M.C.C. Committee and would automatically captain an M.C.C. side, unless a senior member of the committee were playing. But, apart from this game the England captaincy is a very interesting problem.

It has become a problem only because of Chapman's sudden return to form as a batsman. A month ago there was no one to challenge Jardine's position as the outstanding amateur of the day and the only possible man to captain the side to be sent to Australia. Now Chapman is definitely in the picture.

No one who has played under Percy Chapman will deny that he has a very big personality on the cricket field. To begin with, he has a large experience of every kind of cricket, and, taking it as a whole, a successful record as a captain.

That is a good background and helps to give the impression that he will always have a definite plan for any situation.

His greatest asset is undoubtedly his own batting. Even if his example will not carry the day by inspiring others to imitate his methods, you always have the feeling that he will deal with the situation in person, and that no one will get him out.

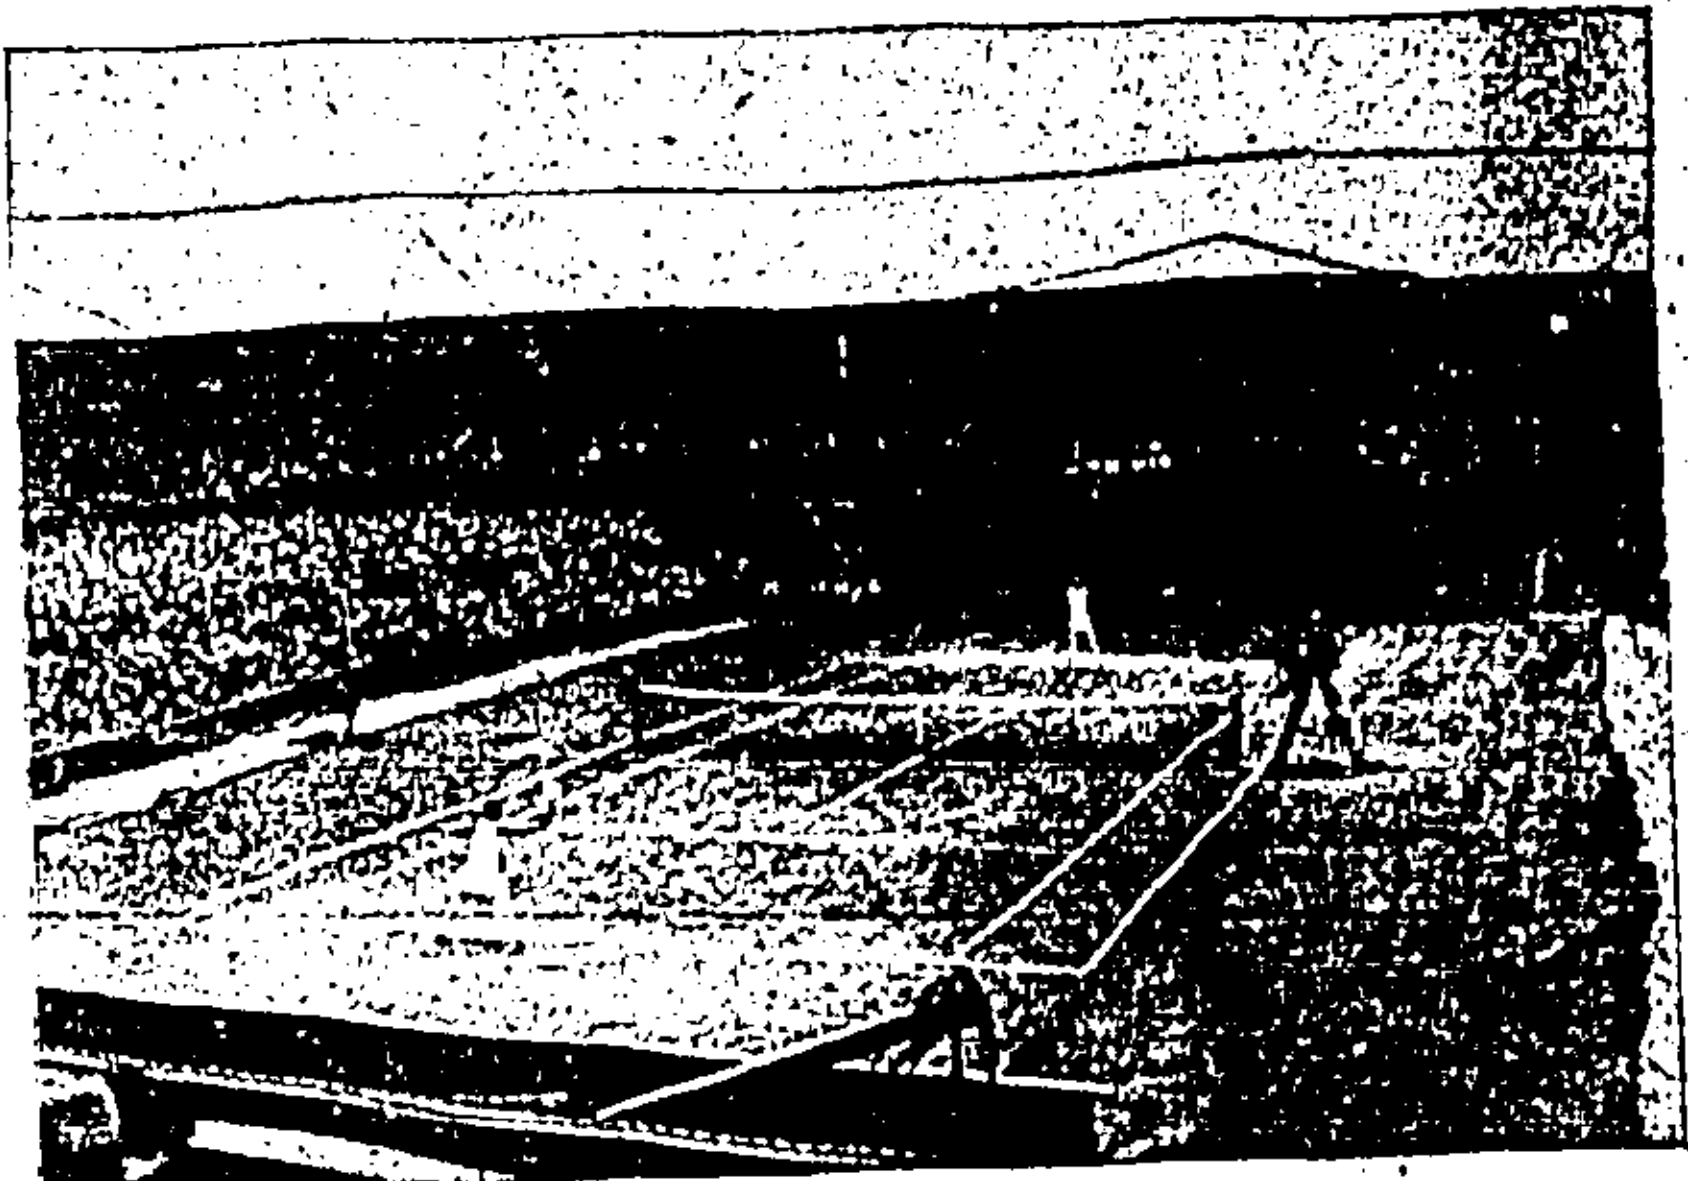

Also, there is always the pleasant suggestion about Jardine that he considers you just as capable of making runs as he is, which is most helpful, even if untrue.

He too is competent. I should describe Chapman as an opportunist on the field and Jardine as a strategist. Neither is ever at a loss.

Jardine does not electrify the men under him in the way Chapman does, but he gives the impression of having foreseen every possible situation, and of having thought out a way to meet it. This may be untrue, as it may be untrue of Chapman that he meets a situation as it comes, but it is the impression they have given to others besides myself, and that is all that concerns the people who play under them.

One other thing about Jardine. He would, I think, be tenacious to

SURROUNDED by stands and terraces, the Centre Court at Wimbledon to-day enjoys the reputation of being the finest and most perfect grass court in the world. It is a monument to the vast progress in popularity and importance enjoyed by the International meeting which starts to-day.

"A" DIVISION.

Surprise For Kowloon Cricket Club.

The Hongkong Cricket Club did well to hold the Kowloon C.C. on the latter's courts, the match ending in a tie, each side claiming 4½ sets. A. L. Sullivan and G. W. Sewell were the Club's outstanding pair, and their half point in the game against the two Finchers went a long way to providing the tie.

Scores: E. C. and E. F. Fincher (K.C.C.) tied with A. L. Sullivan and G. W. Sewell 6-6; beat D. Hazell and E. Grimble 6-3; beat C. Wright and W. Williams 6-3.

A. E. Guest and W. Hyde (K.C.C.) lost to Sullivan and Sewell 2-6; lost to Hazell and Grimble 4-6; beat Wright and Williams 6-2.

P. Madar and C. C. Burnett (K.C.C.) lost to Sullivan and Sewell 0-6; lost to Hazell and Grimble 1-6; beat Wright and Williams 6-1.

"B" DIVISION.

Crushing Defeat of Club de Recreio.

Playing on the home courts, the Chinese Recreation Club inflicted a heavy defeat on the Club de Recreio, who were their most serious rival last year. Li Wai-tong and Tsui Wai-pui proved a formidable combination for the winners, annexing all three sets. The final scores were eight sets to one.

Scores: Li Wai-tong and Tsui Wai-pui (C.R.C.) beat Remedios and Ribeiro 6-1; beat Barretto and Gosano 6-1; beat Barros and Remedios 6-3. Ng Kam-chuen and Choi Ping-fan (C.R.C.) beat Remedios and Ribeiro 6-4; beat Barretto and Gosano 7-5; lost to Barros and Remedios 5-7. Chiu Chun-chiu and W. C. Hung (C.R.C.) beat Remedios and Ribeiro (Continued on Page 9.)

WIMBLEDON FROM ZBW

Mr. Denis Hazell To Describe His Impressions.

Mr. Denis H. Hazell, the Somerset County tennis player, who also appeared at Wimbledon in 1930, is this evening giving a talk from the ZBW studio on his impressions of the All England Tennis Championships.

Mr. Hazell will not only explain the system of application for participation in the Championships, but also the method of eliminating the surplus entrants. His talk will be given at 7.30 p.m. about an hour before the Wimbledon meeting actually opens, and it promises to be of unusual interest and entertainment.

Chapman is competent. He may be right or wrong, but he is never at a loss, and that is an important factor in a captain, since it gives confidence.

But the secret of Chapman's personality does not lie in his experience, but in his play, and to my mind, more than anything, in his fielding.

To play under a captain who is always "aggressive" "electric" best describes what I mean. It is inspiring. Chapman in the field is like no one else playing cricket to-day. He dominates it. He is not only brilliant in any position in which he puts himself, but because he is just a little more brilliant than anyone would expect, he can put himself always in the most vital position and have a very definite effect on the batsman.

FRIGHTENING BATSMEN.

When he fields at "silly" point, for instance, the batsman knows that any shot within a most uncomfortable radius which is off the ground, and which is not going like a cannon ball, will be caught. He instinctively tries therefore either to keep the ball too rigidly on the ground or to hit far too hard, and is at once more likely to make a mistake.

Chapman in the field creates an atmosphere of attack and alertness which is a very great asset to bring to the captaincy. It breeds confidence, and confidence in a captain is half the battle.

the very last degree, and would revel in the long-drawn-out fights in Australia.

Chapman has already been successful in them, so it would be absurd to question his capabilities in play-to-a-finish cricket. But there is something in Jardine's attitude of perpetual attrition which would be very comforting in a tight corner.

The situation as I see it amounts to this: Chapman is a great captain of proved ability, with a personality on the cricket field the value of which it is hard to underestimate. As a batsman, however, he has not been in the first class for several years now, and unless his recent innings have shown a real return to sound methods, he would constitute a grave weakness in our batting order.

THE IDEAL SOLUTION.

Jardine is also outstanding personality, with many qualities which may go to make a very great captain. He lacks Chapman's experience, of captaincy, but has the invaluable asset of being the greatest batsman in England to-day.

The ideal solution would be that both men should be in the side, and if Chapman does reproduce his old form with the bat, believe that Jardine would be only too happy to play under him.

But no part of a game is easy to relearn, and Chapman may find it very hard to be consistent. In which case we cannot be too thankful that there are no men so well qualified to fill of post and that ours is not the responsibility of choosing between them.

OPENS

6-3; beat Barretto and Gomo 6-4; beat Barros and Remedios 7-5.

C.C.C. Score Narrow Win.

On the home courts, the Craigengower C.C. gained a narrow victory over the Hongkong University by five sets to four. J. W. Leonard and G. Lia won all their three matches. Scores: J. W. Leonard and G. Lia (C.C.C.) beat G. K. Ng and G. E. Yeoh 6-1; beat Y. F. Chey and D. J. N. Anderson 6-4; beat T. K. Lien and H. M. Tay 6-4.

E. Zimmern and R. Choa (C.C.C.) beat Ng and Yeoh 7-5; lost to Lien and Anderson 3-6; lost to Lien and Tay 3-6.

W. J. Howard and A. Kitchell (C.C.C.) beat Ng and Yeoh 7-5; lost to Lien and Anderson 3-6; lost to Lien and Tay 4-6.

Hongkong C.C. Defeat Kowloon.

The Hongkong C.C. were "at home" to the Kowloon C.C. and won the match by six sets to three. Bowker and Monaghan played well for the Club, winning their three games. Scores:

Bowker and Monaghan (H.K.C.C.) beat Kilgibacker and Huber 6-3; beat Dunne and Lee 6-3; beat James and Green 6-4.

Nowers and Worrall (H.K.C.C.) beat Kilgibacker and Huber 6-1; tied with Dunne and Lee 6-6; tied with James and Green 6-6.

Gordon and Lloyd (H.K.C.C.) beat Kilgibacker and Huber 6-1; lost to Dunne and Lee 3-6; lost to James and Green 3-6.

Army Stretch The I.R.C.

A very close match was seen at Sookunpo where the Indian Recreation Club entertained the Army Tennis Club, and won by 5½ sets to 3½ sets. The Indians just managed to secure the verdict on the last match decided. Scores:

A. H. Madar and A. R. Minu (I.R.C.) lost to Lecky and Cannon 3-6; lost to Barry and Anderson 4-6; beat Stocker and Croswell 7-5.

E. D. Pereira and M. O. Hoosen (I.R.C.) lost to Lecky and Cannon 3-6; beat Barry and Anderson 7-5; beat Stocker and Croswell 6-2.

S. A. Ismail and O. Ismail (I.R.C.) beat Lecky and Cannon 6-4; tied with Barry and Anderson 6-6; beat Stocker and Croswell 6-2.

South China Beat C.S.C.

The South China A.A. secured an easy win over the Civil Service, winning by 7 sets to two on their own courts. Scores:

K. H. Chan and G. C. Luk (S.C.A.A.) beat Bradley and Pingelley 6-3; beat McDougal and Barrow 6-3.

W. T. Lee and S. Chan (S.C.A.A.) beat Bradley and Pingelley 7-5; beat McDougal and Barrow 6-3; beat Bradley and Barrow 6-2.

C. Y. Tao and C. L. Tsang (S.C.A.A.) lost to Bradley and Pingelley 4-6; lost to McDougal and Barrow 4-6; beat Bradley and Barrow 6-3.

"C" DIVISION.

I.R.C. Defeat Kowloon Indian Tennis Club.

The Kowloon Indians engaged the Indian Recreation Club on their courts at King's Park, the visitors winning by 6 sets to 3. M. P. Madar and S. A. R. Bux did well for the winners in annexing all three sets. Scores:

Feroz Ali and Firdos Khan (K.I.T.C.) lost to S. A. R. Bux and M. P. Madar 4-6; tied with A. A. Rumjahn and A. M. Rumjahn 6-6; beat D. M. A. Razack and A. R. Sufiad 6-3.

M. A. Khan and Iqbal Singh (K.I.T.C.) lost to Bux and Madar 3-6; lost to Rumjahn and Rumjahn 2-6; beat Razack and Sufiad 6-4.

S. R. Saleh and H. Mahan Singh (K.I.T.C.) lost to Bux and Madar 4-6; tied with Rumjahn and Rumjahn 6-6; lost to Razack and Sufiad 2-6.

Police Outpointed By Radio.

On the home courts, the Police R.C. had to concede major points to the Radio Sports Club, who won by 5½ sets to 3½. Scores:

A. R. S. Major and L. Bart Sparrow (Police) lost to G. Singh and William Ng 4-6; lost to C. E. Hanwell and W. L. Plew 4-6; beat J. Dad and M. Khan 6-2.

G. A. Carruthers and B. Wynne (Police) lost to Singh and Ng 2-6; tied with Hanwell and Plew 6-6; beat Dad and Khan 6-1.

C. Pide and B. G. Baker (Police) lost to Singh and Wu 1-6; lost to Hanwell and Plew 4-6; beat Dad and Khan 6-2.

Army Surprise Craigengower.

The Craigengower C.C. were surprisingly defeated by the Army Tennis Club by the large margin of 7 sets to 2 on their own courts. Scores:

Howard and N. B. Kitchell (C.C.C.) at to C. Mitchell and W. Davies 0-6; at to B. Paul and R. Lewis 2-6; beat Jarman and F. E. Matthews 6-2.

W. Reed and R. Lee (C.C.C.) lost to Mitchell and Davies 3-6; lost to Paul and Lewis 3-6; lost to Jarman and Matthews 4-6.

G. Kelly and Y. C. Mok (C.C.C.) lost to Mitchell and Davies 1-6; lost to Paul and Lewis 4-6; beat Jarman and Matthews 6-1.

Y.M.C.A. Defeat Kowloon.

The Y.M.C.A. scored a creditable win over the Kowloon C.C. on the home courts, winning by 6½ sets to 1½. Gray and Panchon did well in their three games for the Y.M.C.A. Scores:

Hamby and Collins (K.C.C.) lost to Gray and Panchon 3-6; beat T. J. Lee and E. R. Price 6-4; beat J. Brown and J. Wilson 6-4.

Gray and Panchon (K.C.C.) lost to Hamby and Collins 3-6; lost to Lee and Price 3-6; lost to Brown and Wilson 3-6.

CHICAGO CUBS AND GIANTS BREAK EVEN

The New York Giants and the Chicago Cubs are engaged at New York and to-day broke even in their two matches. The first went to the Giants by 4-2 and the second to the Cubs 3-0. Boston also shared the two games with Pittsburgh whereas Brooklyn and Philadelphia won both their matches. The Phillies were taken to twelve innings by St. Louis Cardinals in their first encounter while the second was featured by a home run by Chuck Klein.

Washington Senators are dropping further back and by their defeat by Detroit in a match which produced 25 runs, the former leaders are now far behind New York Yankees who won another match by defeating Chicago White Sox. Thanks to a home run by Al Simmons, Philadelphia Athletics were able to secure a 7-6 victory against St. Louis Browns.

The full results of to-day's games are appended:

OUR MUDDLED

If we face facts, we find that the big business men, had they had more intelligence and foresight, might have brought the politicians and financiers to heel instead of whining to them for subsidies and help. There are several obvious weapons they might have used.

They might have realised, too, that to assist in the development of industries in those countries where lower standards of living obtain, was to promote the destruction of the export markets of England and that the time would come when we should not be able to retain our former ascendancy as a great exporting country. They should have been ready to "adopt, adapt, and improve," instead of sighing for the vanished days, which will never return.

It is easy to be wise after the event and, as realists, my generation do not waste time in crying after spilt milk. Nor are we blind to the probability that, with similar upbringing and traditions, we should have made as great a mess of the world as our elders have done. But this does not give us any confidence in the future of civilisation when the leaders of its most stable country are so phenomenally incompetent.

It seems to us, therefore, that, failing a miracle, civilisation will

OBITUARY.

MR. WOO HAY-TONG DIES FROM WOUNDS

Mr. Woo Hay-tong, the well known local millionaire shipping owner, who was shot by his nephew, Chan Fook, in the Chinese freight department of the B. and S. Office on Friday afternoon, died at the Government Civil Hospital on Saturday evening shortly before mid-night despite the best medical attention.

An operation was performed to extract the two bullets. Death was due to collapse from heart weakness. Deceased was 58 years old and had suffered severe loss of blood.

The death of Mr. Woo Hay-tong will be regretted by a large circle of relatives and friends. He was a self-made man, of moderate habits and simple tastes. His connexion with Messrs. Butterfield and Swire dates for some thirty years. Mr. Woo Hay-tong entered the Taikoo office as a shipping clerk at a monthly salary of $40. He showed great interest in his work and this together with his genial disposition won for him an affection which contributed much to his success in later life.

After many promotions he was made chief of the Chinese freight department and appointed Chinese Shipping Comptroller only last year.

A Farmer of Steamers.

In the year 1918 or 1919 the late Mr. Woo Hay-tong leased the Chinese freight and passage business of the Canton-Hongkong vessels owned by the Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamship Company. These river steamers were operated with the B. and S. vessel Fatshan, the two companies being associated in the river enterprise. Mr. Woo Hay-tong's arrangement continued until the expiration of his contract in 1930, when on the suggestion of Sir Robert Ho Tung and fellow directors of the Steamship Company, the latter decided to operate its steamers on its own account.

The late Mr. Woo Hay-tong appeared to have made good profits out of his operation of these steamers, and in recent years he became an increasingly important shipping figure, ordering steamers built for himself. He started the Tung On Shipping Company which built the s.s. Tung On and s.s. Sai On and in addition ran four other steamers on the Hongkong-Canton and Canton-Macao runs.

Real Estate Owner.

The late Mr. Woo Hay-tong was also interested in real estate and share transactions. He is reported to have been worth $7,000,000.

In his later years he contributed much to education and gave, among other donations, $100,000 for the provision of scholarships in local schools.

He was made a J.P. for his public work in Hongkong on June 1.

Apart from his interest in shipping and real estate businesses the late Mr. Woo Hay-tong was also financially connected with a few of the leading rattan furniture manufacturing companies here.

The late Mr. Woo Hay-tong is survived by his wife, five sons, Messrs. Woo Pak-fook, Woo Pak-shau, Woo Pak-chuen, Woo Pak-foo and Woo Pak-kwai and several daughters. He also left behind him two brothers, Messrs. H. K. Woo, L.L.B., well known local solicitor of the legal firm of Woo and Nash, and Woo Hang-dok, who resides in Macao.

Among Mr. Woo's sons, the eldest one, Mr. Woo Pak-fook was at one time connected with the firm of architects, Messrs. Denison, Ram and Gibb, but joined his father's freight department. Two of the five sons worked in the law office of Messrs. Woo and Nash, while the others are still in school.

MR. WOO PAK-LUK.

Memorial Service At Kwong Wah Hospital.

The funeral of the late Mr. Woo Pak-luk, 30 years old, the second son of Mr. Woo Hay-tong, the first victim of the sensational shooting tragedy on Friday, was held yesterday afternoon, when the cortege left the Kwong Wah Hospital at about two o'clock. The deceased was well known in the local clubs and his funeral was attended by many friends and relatives. The chief mourners included his wife, a son and a daughter.

Among the friends present were Messrs. W. C. Bailey, J. R. Mason, J. D. Danby, J. D. Bush, Wong Tak-kwong, Mok Lin, Fung Kuei-yin, P. C. Kwok, H. S. Mok and many others.

There was a brief service held at the Kwong Wah Hospital, by Rev. Mr. Lam and attended by the friends of the deceased. Interment was at the Kowloon Christian Cemetery.

OBSTRUCTING POLICE.

CHINESE YOUTH FINED AT KOWLOON

For having obstructed a police officer in the performance of his duty, a Chinese, Ma Lam, was fined $150 or in default two months' imprisonment, by Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy on Saturday.

Sub-Inspector Baker said that he was on duty about 12.30 a.m. on Saturday morning in Jordan Road on the look-out for street walkers. He saw a woman, who was known to him as a prostitute, walking along the road. The accused came up and joined her. Later he saw the Chinese detective, whom he had posted on the other side of the road, following the couple. He saw the detective run to arrest the accused, who tried to get away but was caught. Later, on the detective's statement, he sent the accused to the Yaumatei police station.

A Chinese detective stated that he was following the couple for a short distance. He saw the accused point towards the Inspector and told the woman he was a police officer, and asked her to quit. Witness then laid a hand on the accused, who tried to get away. He arrested the accused.

Defendant said that he was walking home, when he saw the woman, who was known to him. He engaged in conversation with her, and was pointing out a restaurant to her when the Chinese detective arrested him. He denied warning the woman that a police officer was near-by.

Mr. Fraser convicted the defendant and imposed a fine, remarking that he had chosen a nasty profession for a livelihood.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT ON THE CASTLE PEAK ROAD

An accident which was attended by peculiar circumstances was reported to the Police by the driver of a motor lorry who was towing a motor car along the Castle Peak Road.

The driver, Li Sum, of Portland Street stated that at about noon on Friday he was driving motor lorry 3149 in the vicinity of Castle Peak. He was towing a private car and at one stage during the journey he attempted to pass a stationary motor bus. As he was about to pass he observed another bus coming in the opposite direction and was forced to apply his brakes suddenly to avoid a collision.

The motor car which was being towed, however, collided heavily with the rear of the lorry and was badly damaged.

Another Collision.

Mr. Edward L. Curtis, of 7, Nanking Street, has reported to the Police an accident in which he and a Chinese lady were involved.

Mr. Curtis was driving his car along Tam Kung Road, in the Hunghom District, proceeding in the direction of Kowloon City on Saturday afternoon. When passing Mok Ching Street private car No. 2281, driven by a Chinese lady, came out of Mok Ching Street and the two vehicles came in collision.

LESSON SERMON.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST, HONGKONG

"In the universe, including man, evolved by atomic force?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, yesterday.

The Golden Text was—"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." (Psalms 19: 1).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible,—"I will sing of the mercies of the Lord for ever; with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations. And the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O Lord: thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints. The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine; as for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them." (Psalm 89: 1, 5, 11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy,—"The compounded minerals or aggregated substances composing the earth, the relations which constitute masses hold to each other, the magnitudes, distances, and revolutions of the celestial bodies, are of no real importance, when we remember that they all must give place to the spiritual fact by the translation of man and the universe back into Spirit. In proportion as this is done, man and the universe will be found harmonious and eternal" (p. 209).

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

MEETING TO DECIDE IF CHANGES ARE NEEDED

A meeting was held in the St. Andrew's Church Hall yesterday morning just after the morning service, with the object of testing the feeling of the congregation as to the advisability of making changes both as to the times of the morning and evening services and the length and order of services and sermons.

The Rev. W. Walton Rogers, Vicar of St. Andrew's, presided, and with him on the platform were Mr. J. W. Baldwin and Mr. W. H. Robson, Church Wardens, and Mr. J. H. Hunt, Hon. Secretary.

It was thought by the Church Council that certain changes might be made in the directions indicated, with advantage, though it would not be true to say that attendances generally had been falling off more than is usual at this time of year.

A report prepared by a sub-committee, which had been appointed some weeks ago to make a survey, was read out to the congregation, with its recommendations by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Hunt.

Various suggestions were put forward by the body of the meeting and these recommendations will be put to the monthly meeting of the Church Council to-day. The Council's decision will be made known to the congregation and the general public as soon as possible.

MURDER IN A FLAT

MRS. ELVIRA BARNEY MUST STAND TRIAL

London, June 18.

Mrs. Elvira Barney, wife of Mr. John Sterling Barney, the American singer, and daughter of Sir John Mullens, has been committed for trial on the two charges made against her, first of the murder of Mr. Michael Scott Stephen on May 31, and second of shooting at Mr. Stephen with intent to do grievous bodily harm on May 19.

The killing of Mr. Stephen occurred at Mrs. Barney's flat in London, following a cocktail party and after a quarrel between the two. Mr. Barney is represented by Sir Patrick Hastings, K.C.

The police court hearing has been held at Westminster. As on previous days, again large crowds tried to gain admittance to the court room.

Mrs. Barney was dressed in black with white gardenias in her hat. She continually clutched a bottle of smelling salts.

Emotional Scenes.

There were emotional scenes when Mrs. Barney was committed for trial. She sobbed without restraint when her counsel, Sir Patrick Hastings, read out two of her passionate love letters to Mr. Stephen, one of which had "Love Hut" as its address.

Defective Inspector Winter dramatically gave evidence to the effect that when he and Detective Sergeant Champion visited Mrs. Barney's flat after the tragedy she ordered him from the house and struck the sergeant in the face, crying "I'll teach you to put me in a cell, you vile swine. She subsequently apologised, however.

Mrs. Barney sobbed again when Sir Bernard Spilsbury examined Mr. Stephen's bullet-ridden pull-over, and expressed the opinion that it was most unlikely that the wound could have been self-inflicted, or that the revolver could have been discharged during a struggle such as Mrs. Barney had described.—Reuter.

LAWN BOWLS LEAGUE

CIVIL SERVICE CONTINUE WINNING CAREER

SATURDAY'S GAMES

The defeat of the Kowloon C.C. at the hands of the Civil Service has now definitely established the Happy Valley players as joint favourites with the Craigengower C.C. for the premier honours of the season. The present leaders had a margin of 17 shots in their favour and they thus won their fifth consecutive match. Craigengower C.C. won from Talkoo by 19 shots, the Club de Reccolo scored a narrow victory against the Kowloon B.G.C. and the Kowloon Dock beat the Police by the narrowest possible margin.

FIRST DIVISION.

Defeat of the Kowloon C.C. By Civil Service.

The Civil Service C.C. repeated their success of last year when they beat the champions, the Kowloon C.C., at Happy Valley. The present League leaders won on Saturday by 17 shots. Scores:

E. W. Simmonds, J. W. Deakin, F. J. Jones and A. W. Grimitt (Civil Service) beat G. G. G. (Kowloon C.C.) 17-17. N. J. Behnington, H. Westlake, L. Longbottom and J. Holliday (Civil Service) beat H. Hampton, F. Goodwin, A. Hyde-Lay and J. Hyde 22-11.

S. Randle, S. Alderman, A. H. Oswick and J. J. Gregory (Civil Service) lost to P. T. Farrell, A. C. Barford, H. McAvish and J. C. Lyl 16-10.

Talkoo v. Craigengower.

Winning on all fronts, the Craigengower C.C. beat the Talkoo B.C. at Talkoo by 19 shots. Scores: G. McLeod, J. Sloan, J. Chapman and D. Munro (Talkoo) lost to W. T. Brightman, A. E. Coates, E. el Arculi and U. M. Omar 22-24. J. Watson, D. S. Bone, W. Weir and W. Witherspoon (Talkoo) lost to G. Buchmann, M. O'Brien, C. S. Rosset and R. Bana 17-22. A. Stalker, J. Polson, C. Matthews and J. Russell (Talkoo) lost to M. Souza, L. E. Lamont, D. Rumliah and B. W. Bradbury 11-23.

Reccolo v. Bowling Green.

Always a difficult team to beat on their own green, the Club de Reccolo gave further evidence of their strength when playing at home by defeating the Kowloon B.G.C. by three shots. Scores:

F. V. Ribeiro, J. M. Alves, F. X. Silva and L. A. Guterres (Reccolo) lost to R. Duncan, D. Phillips, R. Nichol and A. M. Holland 16-22. F. Xavier, R. Roberts, A. S. Gomes, and R. F. Luz (Reccolo) drew with G. N. Mitchell, A. K. Taylor, J. G. Meyer and A. M. Holland 21-21. H. A. Alves, P. A. Yvanovich, L. C. R. Souza and G. G. Silva (Reccolo) beat H. E. Stoneham, J. S. Logan, C. S. Bent and W. Russell 29-20.

Police v. Kowloon Dock.

On their own green the Police R.C. lost to the Kowloon Dock by a single shot. Scores: E. C. Post, J. R. McWalter, A. N. Reynolds and W. E. Hollands (Police) lost to G. Docherty, R. Morrison, K. Greig and M. McKelvie 18-24. W. McLeod, W. Glendinning, D. Clow and J. Moss (Police) beat J. V. Ramsay, R. G. Craig, J. Lindsay and J. C. Brown 12-13. J. C. S. Fender, R. H. E. Marks, F. E. R. Booker and W. Mair (Police) beat H. E. Stoneham, J. S. Logan, C. S. Bent and W. Russell 29-20.

little, mushroom houses of the truck gardeners huddled together. They passed a cemetery, the white stones arising up eerily in the gloom.

"Tired, sweets?" Susan shook her head. The man's fingers gripped her slender arm. "You're a nice kid and I like you but you're only half alive. Come to and enjoy yourself. Don't be a crepe hanger!"

She said, "I'm sorry you think I spoiled everything."

"That's all right," His voice thickened, blurred again. "We'll paint the town some time. You'd be grand if you'd just let yourself go."

Susan scarcely heard him. She was counting the blocks now. Eight—six—four—they were almost home.

"The next corner," she murmured, turning to Waring. Now that the dreadful evening was ended she was almost effusive. To be home, safe and sound, seemed too good to be true!

"Good night, sweet child!" Jack Waring murmured.

Susan tore herself away, shaking in every limb. Oh, she hated him, she hated him for doing that!

Leaders Win Fifth Match in Succession on Saturday.

The Craigengower C.C. have increased their advantage over their nearest rivals by a victory against Talkoo whom they beat by ten shots at Happy Valley. Scores:

Medina, Y. Abbas, W. Ward and M. A. Ruzick (Craigengower) beat D. Peoples, J. Wail, T. Grimes and H. McKelvie 22-19. C. Summons, F. K. Modi, A. V. Barros and J. Cavanagh (Craigengower) beat Greenwood, T. Swan, A. MacIndoe, and S. Hope 19-16. D. K. Khanna, G. Duncan, W. V. Field, and H. J. Pearce (Craigengower) beat W. Brown, C. Summers, G. Stewart and R. Keown 23-19.

Kowloon v. Civil Service. Playing at Kowloon, the Civil Service C.C. won their match against the Kowloon Cricket Club by 17 shots. Scores:

F. E. Skinner, W. W. Hirst, F. E. Lawrence and J. Jack (Kowloon C.C.) lost to H. Lockhart, L. R. Whant, T. Holdman and S. Eccleshall 18-25. J. S. Dinnen, W. Harrison, L. J. Blackburn and F. G. Herridge (Kowloon C.C.) lost to T. Armstrong, P. E. Knight, T. McGowan and D. W. Phillips 15-22. W. Edmonds, A. J. Kew, T. W. Carr and L. Jack (Kowloon C.C.) lost to C. Strange, C. J. Tacchi, L. Luck and A. O. Brown 21-24.

Kowloon B.G.C. v. Reccolo. The Kowloon Bowling Green Club defeated the Club de Reccolo on the former's green by 24 shots. Scores:

S. Ashworth, F. V. Whitin, T. Gooding and H. H. Rose (Kowloon B.G.C.) beat F. Prata, L. F. Xavier, J. J. Bato and A. H. Bato 20-8. W. Venables, C. Hatt, V. C. Labrum and F. L. Rapley (Kowloon B.G.C.) beat A. A. Xavier, J. M. S. Rosario, E. M. Remedios and R. A. Bato 20-17.

CHINESE PLAN FOR SETTLEMENT

OFFICIALS' MASS VISIT TO NORTH

Nanking, June 18. Dr. Wellington Koo arrived by air from Shanghai and immediately motored to the Officers' Moral Endeavour Association to attend a meeting of Government leaders. Dr. Wellington Koo, Mr. Wang Ching-wei and Mr. Lo Wen-kun are leaving for Peking at noon to discuss certain important questions with Chang Hsueh-liang.

Dr. Wellington Koo, interviewed by Reuter at the Aviation Field, said that the Lytton Commission are leaving for Japan next Thursday or Friday and will remain there for three weeks; the Commission will then return to Peking to draft the report. Thereafter some members of the Commission will leave for Geneva, while other members will remain in Peking for a longer period.

Mr. Soong Joins Party. Later.

Mr. T. V. Soong was among the party which left for Peking.

The journey is being made in Chang Hsueh-liang's giant Ford plane. Other passengers on board the plane included the Minister for Railways, Mr. Tseng Chung-min.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei declared that they intended to discuss with the Lytton Commission a comprehensive scheme for a settlement of the Sino-Japanese issue.

Dr. Wellington Koo, when interviewed by Reuter, said that he is leaving for Japan with the Commission.—Reuter.

Frank Opinions.

Peking, June 19.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei, Dr. Wellington Koo, Mr. T. V. Soong and Mr. Lo Wen-kun had a prolonged conference with the Lytton commissioners this morning and they lunched together. The Chinese leaders thanked the Commissioners for their lengthy travels and serious efforts to obtain facts regarding Manchuria.

It is stated that the conversations were important and frank opinions were expressed, but details were kept a secret. The Commissioners will meet the Chinese leaders again to-morrow morning.—Reuter.

beat A. A. Xavier, J. M. S. Rosario, E. M. Remedios and R. A. Bato 20-17. G. H. Sherriff, C. L. Farmer, W. E. Hale and W. S. Drake (Kowloon B.G.C.) beat C. Marques, F. X. Xavier, J. G. Ozerio and G. H. Bato 24-15.

Electric R.C. v. Yacht Club.

The Hongkong Electric R.C. won their first match of the season when they entertained the Yacht Club, the margin in their favour being 11 shots. Scores:

J. Sloan, C. E. Gahagan, F. E. Duckworth and S. Deakin (Hongkong Electric) lost to N. V. A. Croucher, J. W. C. Bonnar, E. S. Abraham and W. McFarlane 13-25.

A. Tarbuck, F. Normington, A. Webster and W. H. B. Musket (Hongkong Electric) beat J. Bentley, L. S. Greenhill, A. Stevenson and J. McFarlane 22-12. R. C. Butler, H. Hatch, L. de Rome and J. F. Lunny (Hongkong Electric) beat E. B. Reed, A. Murdoch, B. E. Maughan and A. Chapman 20-13.

FIVE CHINESE APPEAR IN COURT

As a result of the arrest of several boatmen and the recovery of part of a consigna-ment of cargo which had been consigned to Kaymally & Co., five Chinese, including two women, appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court this morning in connexion with the pilfering.

The three men were alleged to have stolen six rolls of artificial silk and 186 yards of tweed cloth from a cargo boat in the harbour on Thursday last, while the two women were charged with receiving stolen property.

The men all pleaded guilty, but the women denied receiving.
Detective Sergeant D. Fitches, who prosecuted, asked for a remand until Wednesday, the case accordingly being adjourned for 48 hours.

compliments of passengers, who will remain for the week of the Congress and in some cases longer.
Some will call at other Irish ports, and others intend to proceed to English and Continental ports before returning. The arrival of the Papal Legate, Cardinal Lorenzo Lauri, will be the occasion of a special display. He will travel by special steamer from Italy—head to-morrow. The Congress flags will arrive at Dun Laoghaire at three o'clock in the afternoon.
The intention is that about half way across the Irish Sea the steamer will be saluted by a squadron of Free State aeroplanes flying in the formation of a Cross.
The Legate will be the guest of Archbishop Byrne, during his stay in Dublin.

BOMB SENSATION

FOUND UNDER PLATFORM AT SCHOOL

London, June 19.
A sensation was caused last
night by the discovery of a bomb
under the platform from which
Lord Lloyd and the Bishop of Carlisle were addressing the boys
of St. Bee's School, Cumberland.
The bomb was timed to explode
during the ceremony.

A slight report was heard, and
it is believed that the detonator
went off, but failed to explode the charge.

The Cumberland Chief Constable immediately telephoned to Scotland Yard, which sent an expert to examine the bomb. It is thought to be too well-made to be the work of a practical joker.

ARSON CHARGE AT SESSIONS

SHAMSHUPO FIRE SEQUEL

FRAUD ALLEGED

The June Criminal Sessions opened this morning before the Palace Judge (Mr. Justice Wood).

Three charges against Cheung Sai-fu, one of murder and two of delivering letters demanding money, with menaces, were adjourned to the July Sessions.

The only other case on the calen-der was a charge of arson against Chan Chok.

Mr. T. S. Whyte-Smith, Assistant Crown Solicitor, conducted the prosecution. The defendant was not represented by counsel.

In outlining the case for the Crown, Mr. Whyte-Smith said there were two counts against the accused, but they were in reality alternative counts. The first was that on May 3rd, 1932, at Shamshupo he had set fire to a shop or dwelling with intent to injure or defraud, contrary to Section 4 of the Malicious Damage Ordinance of 1865. The second charge was that, contrary to Section 3 of the same Ordinance, he had set fire to a house, a man being in the house at the time.

Mr. Whyte-Smith said it was competent for the jury to bring the accused in not guilty or guilty of one of the two charges against him.

EXCESSIVE INSURANCE.

The fire took place on May 3rd in a shop or dwelling house in Shamshupo said the prosecutor. The accused was the proprietor of this shop, living there with his wife and young brother-in-law who assisted in the business. Haberdasher was the main line of business. The accused also had a knitting factory in Nam Chung Street. The stockings manufactured there were sold in his shop. At the time of the fire, the stock-in-trade was insured with the Wing On Company for $1,000 and the furniture for $1,500.

"I shall endeavour to prove that these insurances were excessive," said Mr. Whyte-Smith. "The brother-in-law will say that both he and his sister had gone to bed at 2.30 leaving the accused in the shop going over accounts."
"At 3.15 a.m., an Indian constable on duty in the vicinity saw a man standing in the middle of the road blowing a whistle. The constable cannot swear that this man was the accused, but I think you will be able to infer that much from other evidence."

TWO FIRES.

"Evidence will be given," continued the prosecutor, "that there were two distinct fires burning in the shop when the Indian constable entered. A very significant point is that the distance between them was 20 feet."

SEAMAN SENT TO "HOUSE"

CHARGED WITH BEING A VAGRANT

D. J. Boukousky, 31, a seaman, stated to have deserted from the s.s. Grace Harbour, was charged with being a vagrant before Mr.
Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court to-day.

ago, since when he had been knocking about the Colony until giving himself up to the police during the week-end.

Detective Sergeant Mottram said the American Consul General was endeavouring to get the defendant away within the next few days, and he asked that the man be kept in the House of Detention until that could be arranged.

Boukousky was committed to the House of Detention.

Pang Cheung-shun, of the China Oil Company, was charged before the Hon. Comdr. Ho, at the Marine Court this morning, with having moored three lighters, which were laden with fuel oil, at a place other than the dangerous goods anchorage.
The defendant admitted the offence, and was fined $50 or one month's imprisonment.

A monkey belonging to Private James Latham, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, stationed at the Shamshupo Camp, was removed to the Matukok Slaughter House for observation after it had bitten Lance Corporal Burns of the same Regiment.
The victim was treated by the Medical Officer of the Regiment.

Mr. Whyte-Smith related how the fire had been put out and an examination of the electric lights had shown that they were in good order.

Two uncorked bottles containing a little fluid were found on the floor, he continued. These had been sent to the Government Analyst who found the contents to be kerosene. In addition to that, small police witnesses would say they saw kerosene on entering the premises.

OVER-VALUED.

Mr. Whyte-Smith said his submission that the stock had been over-valued would be supported by an insurance broker who would place the valuation of the stock-in-trade at $1,588.77 and the furniture at $461.25.

The Puisse Judge:—The Crown's case will be that the accused set fire to the house and if you fail on that point you fail altogether.

Mr. Whyte-Smith:—Yes.
Evidence was given by Mr. Charles Arthur Grimes, (Government draftsman), Inspector Vincent (police photographer), Mr. A. Jackson (Assistant Government Analyst), Mr. A. E. B. de Sousa (valuer for the Wing On Insurance Company) and Mr. J. C. Fitz-Henry (Fire Brigade Department).
The case is proceeding.
